TITUS ANDRONICUS

THIS play was entered in the Stationers' Registers on February 6, 1594, to John Danter as "A Noble Roman Historye of Tytus Andronicus." The next note is "Entred alsoe vnto him by warraunt from Mr. Woodcock the ballad thereof."<sup>1</sup> Q<sup>1</sup> was published in 1594. A copy was seen by Langbaine in 1691, but no copy was subsequently known until one was found at Malmö in Sweden in 1904. It is now in the Folger Library. The title-page is The Most Lamentable Romaine Tragedie of Titus Andronicus: As it was Plaide by the Right Honourable the Earle of Darbie, Earle of Pembroke, and Earle of Sussex their Seruants. [Device] LONDON, Printed by Iohn Danter, and are to be sold by Edward White & Thomas Millington, at the little North doore of Paules at the signe of the Gunne. 1594.<sup>2</sup> Before discovery of this Quarto, editors treated Q<sup>2</sup> as Q<sup>1</sup> and Q<sup>3</sup> as Q<sup>2</sup>. Our Q<sup>2</sup> had for title The most lamentable Romaine Tragedie of Titus Andronicus. As it hath sundry times beene playde by the Right Honourable the Earle of Pembroke, the Earle of Darbie, the Earle of Sussex, and the Lorde Chamberlaine theyr Seruants. [Ornament] AT LONDON, Printed by I. R. for Edward White and are to bee solde at his shoppe, at the little North doore of Paules, at the signe of the Gun. 1600.<sup>3</sup> Q<sup>2</sup> agrees substantially with Q<sup>1</sup> except in certain passages towards the end where the copy of Q<sup>1</sup> used in printing Q<sup>2</sup> must have been damaged and improvised passages make good the deficiencies.<sup>4</sup> These improvised passages appear perforce in the older edited texts. Q<sup>1</sup> contains at i i 35 three and a half lines which Q<sup>2</sup> eliminated as anticipating future action and hence as incorrect at that place. Q<sup>3</sup>, based on Q<sup>2</sup>, was printed by Edward Allde for White in 1611 and F<sup>1</sup> was based on it. None of the Quartos has Act or Scene indications. F<sup>1</sup> begins with Actus Primus. Scena Prima. and afterwards marks only Act divisions. F<sup>1</sup> also contains a whole scene not in the Quartos, (iii ii) discussed below. The effect of the Statute against Profanity (3 Jac. I) is to be seen in F's changed reading in iv ii 71 and equivocation is expunged at iv ii 76. Greg considers Collations from Q<sup>1</sup>, <sup>2</sup> and some from Q<sup>3</sup> F, etc., are given in this present edn. that copy for Q<sup>1</sup> was probably the author's MS. but that the stage directions are such as one would expect from an author not closely connected with the theatre. The centring and spacing of speech-prefixes on signature I., I., in v i Greg ascribes to probable elimination of some lines during printing (but see note to ll. 121-24).<sup>1</sup> Q<sup>1</sup> at m i 282, 283 and F at rv i 36 print superfluous words, on which see footnotes.

Neither Q nor F provides entrance for Alarbus. He never speaks, and it is possible that he was never meant to appear. The only mention of him in Stage Directions is in the exit at i i 129, which may be an error. The Alarbus incident is clearly an addition to the original plot, and its dramatic effect could still be produced if the character were eliminated from the action.

There are signs of disturbance in the text at i i 35, 129, and, as pointed out by Greg, at i i 391, where Marcus's speech introduces an abrupt transition.<sup>2</sup> The reason for this last is that the abduction of Lavinia by Bassianus and the affair of Mutius, like the whole Alarbus incident, are additions to the original story. They may have been made in the revision of an old play or during the composition of the extant play or as a later revision of it: such evidence as there is, the mention of these episodes in the running course of the subsequent text at i i 418, 453, ii iii 164, points to addition whilst composition was in progress. The three and a half lines in Q<sup>1</sup> at i i 35 which the Alarbus incident replaced should have been deleted. The facts indicate a change of plan by the dramatist. There is other evidence. No trace of Mutius exists in any other available version of the plot. In the early German Tragödie von Tito Andronico and the English Ballad, Titus brought three sons alive to Rome. In the Ballad Titus refers to his total of twenty-five sons of whom twenty-two were slain in war (ll. 13, 15). In the Shakespearean play Titus had likewise twenty-five sons (i i 79); he brought four alive to Rome and twenty-one should have been recorded as lost in war; but at iii i 10, 11 he says: "For two-and-twenty sons I never wept, Because they died in honour's lofty bed." Of the surviving sons, two are required, as in the German play and Ballad, for the pit incident and one, our Lucius, and Vespasian in the German play, lives on to found the new régime.<sup>3</sup> Mutius cannot possibly be included in the twenty-two sons lost: he was slain and repudiated by his father; and obviously he was added to the story and the adjustment of numbers overlooked. The matter of Alarbus is dealt with above. The addition in F<sup>1</sup> of iii ii, which must have been derived from MS. and which is perhaps in maturer style than the rest, spans the transition from the horrors of iii i to the revelations of iv i, shows by Titus's strange conduct the change in him leading to his subsequent rages and disturbance of mind, and emphasises the pathos needed to set off the accumulating atrocities. It was, so to speak, a bridging scene. Bolton thinks it was designed to give richer parts to those playing Titus and Marcus.<sup>1</sup> In v ii 45 Titus names Chiron and Demetrius as Rape and Murder before he is told what they represent.

The question of the play's authorship has led to much difference of view. There have been three distinct schools of thought: that Shakespeare had no hand in the play; that he merely revised it; and that he wrote it entirely. "All the editors and critics," wrote Johnson, "agree with Mr. Theobald in supposing the play spurious."<sup>2</sup> Hallam later records the same.<sup>3</sup> Swinburne detected the hand of an imitator.<sup>4</sup> Believers that Shakespeare retouched or 'improved' the play have been numerous. Bishop Percy was an advocate of 'improvement';<sup>5</sup> and among the moderns Dover Wilson has lent his authority to the view that in this play Shakespeare was a reviser (but not of Act I which he thinks non-Shakespearian).<sup>6</sup> The German scholars have generally been firm believers that Shakespeare wrote the whole; some later critics like Cunliffe and Raleigh<sup>7</sup> were similarly inclined; and more recently Hereward T. Price, Frank O'Connor, Spencer, Harrison and Alexander have been staunch advocates of Shakespeare's sole authorship. To these views may be added Greg's independent theory that in 1594 there were two versions of the play, one belonging to Pembroke's men which Shakespeare may have revised and another possessed by Sussex's company; that the Sussex text was sold and printed as Q<sup>1</sup>; that the Pembroke text was lost in the Globe Theatre fire of 1613; that Shakespeare's company replaced their prompt-copy by procuring a copy of Q<sup>3</sup> in which they made some alterations in the stage directions and added iii ii from a MS. based on the actors' memory of the words.<sup>8</sup> Another physical possibility, that the extant play is a Shakespeare play revised by somebody else, has not been taken seriously.<sup>9</sup>

There are difficulties in all these views. Against the first are the facts that Meres in Palladis Tamia, 1598, states that Shakespeare wrote

Greg's theory was somewhat developed in MLR, xiv 322 f. The argument against it is the strong evidence of Shakespeare in the extant play. <sup>9</sup>Advocated by Henry D. Gray in Flügel Memorial Volume, Stanford Univ., California, 1916, 114-26; attacked by Tucker Brooke in MLN, xxxiv, 1919, 32-36; withdrawn by Gray in Philological Quarterly, v, 1926, 166-72, in favour of the view that Sh. was the reviser of an old play.

Titus Andronicus, and that Heminge and Condell included it in F<sup>1</sup>. In the circle in which he lived and moved Meres was likely to be well-informed,<sup>1</sup> and Heminge and Condell were long members of Shakespeare's company and were present at the fire in 1613.<sup>2</sup> J. M. Robertson dismissed this evidence on the ground that Meres's lists were artificially arranged in sixes, and were incomplete, and so open to suspicion; and that the principle of theatrical property in plays would lead Shakespeare's company to claim the play as his:<sup>3</sup> and, basing himself on parallel passages, metre and other factors, he ascribed the play to Greene and Peele and perhaps also Kyd and Lodge. Grosart, again largely on the parallel passage principle, made strong claims for Greene as principal author.<sup>4</sup> Parallel passages are, however, a double-edged weapon. Advocates of the view that Shakespeare was here a reviser cite an abundance of phrases and mannerisms to be paralleled in genuine Shakespearian work, particularly the poems and early plays; and also strong indications of the handiwork of Peele. Dover Wilson has given the chief evidence of this kind with the conclusion that "only two dramatists were concerned in the making of Titus as a whole, Peele and Shakespeare."<sup>5</sup> Considerations against this view are the matter of Meres, Heminge and Condell mentioned above and the wider question whether, notwithstanding parallels of Peele, Shakespeare could not, at this early stage, have written the whole. Against the third view there are the signs of Peele, the evidence of revision if interpreted as later 'improvement' and the play's repulsive character.<sup>6</sup>

As for the excessive repulsiveness, it may be urged that a young dramatist, eager to please his company, perhaps still to establish himself well with them, might respond to their request for a strong Senecan Revenge Play after the mode that had proved so popular and profitable. Allowance may be made for the compulsive pressure of the dramatic cult of the time, added to which there is something to be said, perhaps, for the view of Raleigh and others that the play may be regarded "as a work of youthful bravado."<sup>7</sup>

Regarding parallel passages, the situation at the time was that there was not the same recognised author's property right in dramatic plots, situations and phrases as now. In the main the dramatists worked for their companies even more than for themselves. Besides which, the plays printed from memorial reconstruction demonstrate that actors carried in their heads abundance of lines from various plays which they could slip into a forgotten passage in a memorised play or by means of which they might modify the dramatist's language, especially in a similar situation. Playwrights were themselves in some cases actors, memorising the plays of others, or were, we may be sure, ardent playgoers and play-readers; and they could readily acquire, even unconsciously, each other's tricks and mannerisms. The phrase-memory of the professional theatrical people was remarkable. Shakespeare himself has whole speeches compounded largely of Biblical phrases where it is evident that he was not turning over the pages of the Bible, but that he appropriately produced them, together with his own invention, from his enormous verbal store.<sup>1</sup> There are other cases where, perhaps unconsciously, he re-cast recognisable verbal material from elsewhere and fitted it into similar circumstances.<sup>2</sup> Greene's attack on Shakespeare, though it has a wider implication, has probable reference to apparent borrowings from others. Miss St. Clare Byrne has reminded us that parallels may be explained in more ways than one, that quality is all-important and that mere verbal parallelism (in establishing authorship) is of but little value in comparison with parallelism of thought coupled with some verbal parallelism.<sup>3</sup> The Henry VI plays, which have parallels with Titus,<sup>4</sup> contain matter which parallels older non-Shakespearian plays and foreshadows in phrase, manner and political outlook the Shakespearian drama to come.<sup>5</sup> Feuillerat, however, affirms that the basis of the play was a text written by author 'A,' with Marlovian additions by 'B,' and substantially revised (including I i) by Shakespeare in three periods as shown by the proportions of feminine endings in the verse, which are respectively 2.8%, 8.7% and 14.2%. He thinks that F was based on Q<sup>3</sup> with the help of a prompt book and that III ii was omitted in the Quartos as liable to excite laughter.<sup>6</sup>

Henslowe in his diary marked Titus Andronicus as 'ne' (new) on January 23, 1594.<sup>7</sup> It was printed by Danter and published the same year. The assumption that the date of composition was 1593-94 is fairly reliable; but Halliday thinks the play too crude for 1594 and prefers 1592. Chambers and others adopt 1593-94. Dover Wilson concludes that Shakespeare ended his work on the text by January, 1594.

A possible source of the play is known.<sup>1</sup> There are six published versions of the story: the Shakespearian play, the Ballad (B) in Percy's Reliques (and Roxburghe and Shirburn Ballads), the German Tragædia von Tito Andronico (G, printed in 1610),<sup>2</sup> the Linz Programme of Raache gegen Raache, played in 1699,<sup>3</sup> and the early Dutch play, Aran and Titus (D, printed in 1641);<sup>4</sup> and a mid-eighteenth century chapbook in the Folger Library. There have been proposals to associate the English play with tittus & vespacia recorded by Henslowe as performed in 1591-92, largely because the German tragedy has Vespasian as the name for our Lucius; but the German play changes all the names except Titus; and Titus and Vespasian, which is lost, was, as Greg surmised,<sup>5</sup> probably based on the old romance of that name.<sup>6</sup> It has been thought that the Ballad depended on the Shakespearian play.<sup>7</sup> This can hardly be: in it all of Titus's three sons perish in connexion with the pit incident; there is no Alarbus or Mutius, no nomination of Andronicus, no betrothal of Lavinia to the Emperor, no buried gold; the vendetta springs merely from the pride and wickedness of the Gothic Queen and the Moor. There are, however, strong resemblances: Bassianus as in the play (i i 10) is called Cæsar's son and Tamora's sons are disguised as Rape and Murder. Joseph Quincy Adams surmised that the prose History of Titus Andronicus and the Ballad (identical with that in the Percy Reliques) contained in the Folger Library chapbook may be late reprints of the Historye of Tytus Andronicus and Ballad thereof entered to John Danter in the Stationers' Registers on February 6, 1594 (Adams: TA, 9). Ralph M. Sargent in Studies in Philology, xlv, 167-183, showed that the Ballad depends on the History which plausibly claims to be a translation from the Italian. He analysed the History and compared it with the Shakespearian play, coming to the conclusion that the narrative represents a version of Shakespeare's source, if not that source itself.<sup>8</sup>

In the library of the Marquis of Bath at Longleat is a drawing purporting to have been made by Henry Peacham in 1594 or 1595, together with a version of the text of Titus Andronicus containing i i 104-120 and v i 125-144 joined by three improvised lines consisting in part of bits of i i 121 and 125.<sup>1</sup> In the midst of the picture stands Titus, evidently declaiming or finishing a speech, with an upright staff in his left hand; behind him are two military men, ornately dressed, with halberds and swords. Facing him Tamora kneels, her hands lifted together in supplication; and behind her kneel her two sons, Chiron and Demetrius, prisoners and bound. In the right foreground is the black Aaron, his naked sword in his left hand and gesticulating with his right, in an attitude of defiant bravado. The dresses shown in the picture are thought to represent those worn by the original actors. The text below the picture, apart from the improvised lines, differs from Q and F in some minor readings and agrees with one against the other in a few minor cases; but all its differences are such as frequently appear in transcribers' 'copies.'<sup>2</sup> According to the editors, Aaron is present as a prisoner, whilst i i 104-120, transcribed below the picture, is spoken. If the picture were of the usual isolationary type, where the objects in a given space are depicted as they appear to an observer at a given moment,<sup>3</sup> Aaron would then be so shown. The picture, however, like the picture of Troy described by Shakespeare in Lucrece, is of the 'comprehensive' type, where, in one compass, scenes as they occur in the course of a story in different places, or the same place at the same time or different times, are portrayed. In this very simple example of the comprehensive method, Aaron is shown as the utterer of the lines in v i 125-144. Thus, the picture and the words match each other.<sup>4</sup> Beneath the quotations appears in position as for a speech-prefix the word Alarbus. There are, of course, no words added, and speech-prefix it can hardly be. The two figures behind Titus represent two of his sons: there should be four, but the artist has drawn two as token and representative. The picture confirms the deduction made from the play and other versions that there may have been no actual character Alarbus: he was always 'off.'

In continental versions of the story, the Dutch play and the Programme, Titus wishes to sacrifice Aaron to Mars and Tamora intercedes with the emperor to save him. The dramatist, in switching from Aaron as potential victim to Alarbus as actual victim, creates a strong revenge motive for Tamora, though the actual plotting and villainy are still left to Aaron. It can be argued that the Alarbus incident entails a loss of sympathy for Titus at the very beginning of the play and that this frustrates the pity which the true tragic hero should excite. But Shakespeare's characterisation of Titus illustrates a method which the dramatist was to develop increasingly, the building up of a character by dissimilar and even opposing elements. In adding the ruthless execution of Alarbus to the magnanimity and patriotism displayed by Titus we are given a hint of the horrible excesses which, under provocation, he is to commit later in the play. Although it must be admitted that this play excites repulsive horror rather than the more exalted reaction proper to tragedy, it may be said that the play is true to the method employed in so much later tragedy in that the action fulfils its purpose in eliminating evil at whatever cost, leaving the augury of better things to come.

Dover Wilson holds that Shakespeare's master-stroke in the play was the transformation of Aaron into a humorous and vivacious villain; and that he introduced an element of mockery and caricature into the play, especially in Marcus's grisly speech in II iv. In terms, however, of Senecan drama and the Elizabethan readiness to tolerate horrors, it would seem that the play's frightfulness was meant to be taken seriously.

 A special party, have by common voice,
 In election for the Roman empery
 Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
 For many good and great deserts to Rome.
 A nobler man, a braver warrior, 25
 Lives not this day within the city walls.
 He by the senate is accited home
 From weary wars against the barbarous Goths,
 That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
 Hath yoked a nation strong, trained up in arms. 30
 Ten years are spent since first he undertook
 This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
 Our enemies' pride. Five times he hath returned Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
 In coffins from the field. 35
 And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,

It is clear from this text, from Coriolanus ii ii, Julius Cæsar ii iv 24 and Hamlet iii ii ("I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' th' Capitol."), that Shakespeare conceived the Senate House to be in the Capitol (Sugden, 460). 177 Solon's happiness,] A reference to Solon's reported statement to Cræsus that no man can be called happy until his end. Herodotus, i 32. 182 palliament of white] Schmidt glosses palliament simply as "a robe"; NED as "white gown of a candidate for the Roman consulship." The word was first used, so far as is known, by Peele in his Order of the Garter describing the robes of the Knights:

*A goodly king in rôbes most richly dight,
 The upper like a Roman palliament,
 Indeed a chaperon, for such it was;*

A chaperon was and is normally a hood. It is difficult to identify any part of these highly coloured Garter robes with the white palladium or toga candida mentioned in the play. The point is important as the passage is part of Dover Wilson's proof that the basis of the play was the work of Peele, and part of Price's that the different meanings of palladium in poem and play indicate that Peele had no part in the play but that Shakespeare had read his poem and had in his mind a vague recollection of a Roman palladium and of Roman weeds that were white. ## DEMETRIUS

Why, boy, although our mother, unadvised,
 Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
 Are you so desperate grown to threat your friends? 40
 Go to! Have your lath glued within your sheath
 Till you know better how to handle it.

CHIRON

Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,
 Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

DEMETRIUS

Ay, boy, grow ye so brave?

They draw.

AARON (coming forward) Why, how now, lords! 45
 So near the Emperor's palace dare ye draw,
 And maintain such a quarrel openly?
 Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge.
 I would not for a million of gold
 The cause were known to them it most concerns; 50
 Nor would your noble mother for much more
 Be so dishonoured in the court of Rome.
 For shame, put up.

DEMETRIUS Not I, till I have sheathed
 My rapier in his bosom, and withal
 Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat 55
 That he hath breathed in my dishonour here.

 Foul-spoken coward! that thunder'st with thy tongue,
 And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

CHIRON

Ay, so the turn were served.

AARON

That you affect; and so must you resolve,

You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand:

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop.

My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad 10
 When everything doth make a gleeful boast?
 The birds chant melody on every bush;
 The snake lies rolléd in the cheerful sun;
 The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
 And make a chequered shadow on the ground. 15
 Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
 And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
 Replying shrilly to the well-tuned horns,
 As if a double hunt were heard at once,
 Let us sit down and mark their yellowing noise; 20
 And, after conflict such as was supposed
 The wand'ring prince and Dido once enjoyed,
 When with a happy storm they were surprised,
 And curtained with a counsel-keeping cave,
 We may, each wreathéd in the other's arms, 25
 Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber,
 Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
 Be unto us as is a nurse's song
 Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Madam, though Venus govern your desires, 30
Saturn is dominator over mine.

What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,

Even as an adder when she doth unroll 35

Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, 40
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee.

This is the day of doom for Bassianus:
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood. 45

Seest thou this letter ? Take it up, I pray thee,
And give the King this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more: we are espied.
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction. 50

TAMORA

Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have ticed me hither to this place.

A barren detested vale you see it is:

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,

Overcome with moss and baleful mistletoe.

Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,

Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven.

And when they showed me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries,

As any mortal body hearing it

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale,

105

But straight they told me they would bind me here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,

And leave me to this miserable death.

And then they called me foul adulteress,

Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

110

That ever ear did hear to such effect;

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed.

Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth called my children.

TAMORA

Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
 Even for his sake am I pitiless.
 Remember, boys, I poured forth tears in vain
 To save your brother from the sacrifice;
 But fierce Andronicus would not relent. 165
 Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will;
 The worse to her, the better loved of me.

LAVINIA

O Tamora, be called a gentle queen,
 And with thine own hands kill me in this place!
 For 'tis not life that I have begged so long: 170
 Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

TAMORA

What begg'st thou then? Fond woman, let me go.

LAVINIA

'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more
 That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
 O, keep me from their worse than killing lust, 175
 And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
 Where never man's eye may behold my body.
 Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

TAMORA

So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee.
 No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. 180

DEMETRIUS

Away! for thou hast stayed us here too long.

LAVINIA

No grace? No womanhood? Ah, beastly creature!
 The blot and enemy to our general name!
 Confusion fall—

Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband. 185

Enter Aaron, with Quintus and Martius.

AARON

Come on, my lords, the better foot before.

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit

Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

QUINTUS

My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

195

MARTIUS

And mine, I promise you: were it not for shame,

Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

Falls into the pit.

QUINTUS

What, art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is covered with rude-growing briers,

Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood

As fresh as morning dew distilled on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me.

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

MARTIUS

O brother, with the dismal'st object hurt

That ever eye with sight made heart lament!

Who is this? My niece, that flies away so fast!
 Cousin, a word: where is your husband?
 If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!
 If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
 That I may slumber an eternal sleep! 15
 Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
 Hath lopped and hewed and made thy body bare
 Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments
 Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
 And might not gain so great a happiness 20
 As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
 Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
 Like to a bubbling fountain stirred with wind,
 Doth rise and fall between thy roséd lips,
 Coming and going with thy honey breath. 25
 But, sure, some Tereus hath deflowered thee,
 And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.
 Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
 And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
 As from a conduit with three issuing spouts, 30
 Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
 Blushing to be encountered with a cloud.
 Shall I speak for thee? Shall I say 'tis so?
 O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
 That I might rail at him to ease my mind! 35

 And he hath cut those pretty fingers off
 That could have better sewed than Philomel.

 Tremble like aspen-leaves upon a lute, 45
 And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
 He would not then have touched them for his life!

Grave Tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—

LUCIUS

My gracious lord, no Tribune hears you speak.

TITUS

Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,
They would not mark me: if they did mark,
They would not pity me; yet plead I must, 35
And bootless unto them.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones,
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the Tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale. 40

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
And, were they but attir'd in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no Tribunes like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, Tribunes more hard than stones; 45
A stone is silent and offendeth not,

Therefore I tell my sorrowes bootles to the stones.

F's heare in this first line was perhaps incorrectly caught from the preceding line. Q<sup>2</sup>'s or, transformed by F into oh, was an attempt to correct the metre. Dyce amended the Q text by reading them since I complain. in l. 36. Some editors, Cam, Globe, Herford adopt Q<sup>2</sup> text but read *them . . . Delius, Craig, Chambers, Baildon, Witherspoon, Kittredge, NCE follow Q<sup>2</sup> (with some changes in punctuation). CNS follows Q<sup>1</sup> but reads them . . . Globe marks l. 36 as doubtful. Minor changes in punctuation are not here noticed. Dover Wilson (CNS, 127) thinks the passage a typical Shakespearian tangle. Q<sup>1</sup>, however, seems to give a perfectly good text without Q<sup>2</sup>'s or or F's oh and without dots. The phrase yet plead I must And bootless unto them, where And = If, is an expansion of Titus's reason for appealing to stones rather than men. The whole passage is the somewhat incoherent utterance of a man distracted by suffering, and is movingly pathetic. 44 Tribunes] From Q<sup>1</sup>. LUCIUS

To rescue my two brothers from their death:
For which attempt the judges have pronounced 50
My everlasting doom of banishment.

TITUS

O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey 55
But me and mine. How happy art thou then,
From these devourers to be banishéd!
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

MARCUS

Titus, prepare thy agéd eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break. 60
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

TITUS

Will it consume me? Let me see it then.

MARCUS

This was thy daughter.

TITUS

Why, Marcus, so she is.

LUCIUS

Ay me, this object kills me!

TITUS

Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her. 65
Speak, Lavinia, what accurséd hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st; 70
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;
And they have nursed this woe in feeding life;
In bootless prayer have they been held up, 75
And they have served me to effectless use.
Now all the service I require of them

MARCUS

O, that delightful engine of her thoughts,
That blabbed them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung 85
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear!

LUCIUS

O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

MARCUS

O, thus I found her straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself as doth the deer
That hath received some unrecuring wound. 90

TITUS

It was my dear; and he that wounded her
Hath hurt me more than had he killed me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environed with a wilderness of sea,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave, 95
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banished man;
And here my brother, weeping at my woes. 100
But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have madded me. What shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so? 105
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears;
Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyred thee.
Thy husband he is dead; and for his death
Thy brothers are condemned, and dead by this.
Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her! 110

How they are stained, like meadows yet not dry 125
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness
And make a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands like thine? 130
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Enter Titus Andronicus, Marcus, Lavinia, and the Boy Lucius.

TITUS

So, so, now sit: and look you eat no more
 Than will preserve just so much strength in us
 As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
 Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wreathen knot.
 Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands, 5
 And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
 With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
 Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
 Who, when my heart, all mad with misery,
 Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh, 10
 Then thus I thump it down.
 (To Lavinia) Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs?
 When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,
 Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
 Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans; 15
 Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
 And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
 That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
 May run into that sink and, soaking in,
 Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears. 20

MARCUS

Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
 Such violent hands upon her tender life.

TITUS

How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
 Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
 What violent hands can she lay on her life? 25
 Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands,
 To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
 How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?
 O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
 Lest we remember still that we have none. 30

Fie, fie, how franticy I square my talk,
 As if we should forget we had no hands,
 If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
 Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.
 Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says. 35
 I can interpret all her martyred signs:
 She says she drinks no other drink but tears,
 Brewed with her sorrow, meshed upon her cheeks.
 Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
 In thy dumb action will I be as perfect 40
 As begging hermits in their holy prayers.
 Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
 Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
 But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
 And by still practice learn to know thy meaning. 45

BOY

Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments.
 Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

MARCUS

Alas, the tender boy, in passion moved,
 Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

MARCUS

Poor harmless fly,

That, with his pretty buzzing melody,

Came here to make us merry! And thou hast killed him.

MARCUS

Pardon me, sir: it was a black ill-favoured fly,

Like to the Empress' Moor. Therefore I killed him.

TITUS

But that between us we can kill a fly

BOY

Help, grandsire, help! My aunt Lavinia
Follows me everywhere, I know not why.
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes.
Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

MARCUS

Stand by me, Lucius. Do not fear thine aunt.

TITUS

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee.

10

Somewhither would she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons than she hath read to thee

Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

In Qq Ff it ends Titus's speech. Delius's note is that this line, before which no name is specified, is rightly accorded by Capell to Marcus; but l. 14 in Qq Ff ends in a colon, meaning a run-on, and the fact that young Lucius replies to "My lord" seems insufficient to disturb the textual allocation. Capell, Cam, Globe, Delius, Craig, Baidon, Herford, Witherspoon, Kittredge ascribe to Marcus. Chambers, NCE, CNS, as in Q F, include in Titus's speech.

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her.
 For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
 Extremity of griefs would make men mad;
 And I have read that Hecuba of Troy 20
 Ran mad for sorrow. That made me to fear;
 Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt
 Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
 And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:
 Which made me down to throw my books and fly, 25
 Causeless perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt.

 I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

 Come, and take choice of all my library,
 And so beguile thy sorrow till the heavens 35

AARON

Villain, I have done thy mother.

DEMETRIUS

And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone her.

Woe to her chance, and damned her loathéd choice!

Accursed the offspring of so foul a fiend!

CHIRON

It shall not live.

AARON

It shall not die.

NURSE

Aaron, it must: the mother wills it so.

AARON

What, must it, nurse? Then let no man but I

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

DEMETRIUS

I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point.

85

Nurse, give it me: my sword shall soon dispatch it.

AARON

Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.

Stay, murtherous villains! Will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky

That shone so brightly when this boy was got,

90

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point

That touches this my first-born son and heir!

I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,

With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,

Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!

Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue

In that it scorns to bear another hue;

100

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.

Yet there's as little justice as at land.

No! Publius and Sempronius, you must do it: 10

'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth.

Then, when you come to Pluto's region,

I pray you, deliver him this petition:

Tell him, it is for justice and for aid, 15

And that it comes from old Andronicus,

Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.

Ah, Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable

What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. 20

Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,

And leave you not a man-of-war unsearched.

Arm, my lords! Rome never had more cause.
 The Goths have gathered head, and with a power

'Tis he the common people love so much:
 Myself hath often heard them say,
 When I have walk'd like a private man,
 That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, 75
 And they have wished that Lucius were their Emperor.

TAMORA

Why should you fear? Is not your city strong?

SATURNINUS

Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
 And will revolt from me to succour him.

TAMORA

King, be thy thoughts imperious like thy name. 80
 Is the sun dimmed that gnats do fly in it?
 The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
 And is not careful what they mean thereby,
 Knowing that with the shadow of his wings
 He can at pleasure stint their melody. 85
 Even so mayest thou the giddy men of Rome.
 Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou Emperor,
 I will enchant the old Andronicus
 With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
 Than baits to fish or honey-stalks to sheep, 90
 Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,
 The other rotted with delicious feed.

SATURNINUS

But he will not entreat his son for us.

TAMORA

If Tamora entreat him, then he will.
 For I can smooth, and fill his aged ears 95
 With golden promises, that, were his heart
 Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
 Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
 (To Æmilius) Go thou before to be our ambassador.
 Say that the Emperor requests a parley 100
 Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting
 Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Flourish. Enter Lucius with an army of Goths, with drums and soldiers.

LUCIUS

Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
 I have received letters from great Rome
 Which signifies what hate they bear their Emperor,
 And how desirous of our sight they are.
 Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, 5

SECOND GOTH

Renowned Lucius, from our troops I strayed 20
 To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
 And, as I earnestly did fix mine eye
 Upon the wasted building, suddenly
 I heard a child cry underneath a wall.
 I made unto the noise, when soon I heard 25
 The crying babe controlled with this discourse:
 'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!
 Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
 Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
 Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor. 30
 But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,
 They never do beget a coal-black calf.
 Peace, villain, peace!'—even thus he rates the babe—

Surprised him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.

LUCIUS

O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil 40
That robbed Andronicus of his good hand;
This is the pearl that pleased your Empress' eye;
And here's the base fruit of her burning lust.
Say, wall-eyed slave, whither wouldst thou convey
This growing image of thy fiendlike face? 45
Why dost not speak? What, deaf? Not a word?
A halter, soldiers! Hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

AARON

Touch not the boy: he is of royal blood.

LUCIUS

Too like the sire for ever being good. 50
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.

A ladder brought, which Aaron is made to ascend.

Lucius, save the child,
And bear it from me to the Empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things 55
That highly may advantage thee to hear.

And this shall all be buried in my death
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

AARON

Swear that he shall, and then I will begin. 70

LUCIUS

Who should I swear by? Thou believest no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

AARON

What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not:
Yet, for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee called conscience, 75
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath. For that I know
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears, 80
To that I'll urge him. Therefore thou shalt vow
By that same god, what god soe'er it be
That thou adorest and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up,
Or else I will discover nought to thee. 85

Even by my god I swear to thee I will.

And cut her hands, and trimmed her as thou sawest.

AARON

Why, she was washed and cut and trimmed, and 'twas
Trim sport for them which had the doing of it.

AARON

Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them.
That coddling spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set.
That bloody mind, I think, they learned of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.
Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I trained thy brethren to that guileful hole
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay.
I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within that letter mentioned,
Confederate with the Queen and her two sons.
And what not done that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?
I played the cheater for thy father's hand;
And, when I had it, drew myself apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pried me through the crevice of a wall
When for his hand he had his two sons' heads;
Beheld his tears and laughed so heartily,

TAMORA

This closing with him fits his lunacy. 70
 Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick humours,
 Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
 For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
 And, being credulous in this mad thought,
 I'll make him send for Lucius his son; 75
 And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
 I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
 To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
 Or at the least make them his enemies.
 See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme. 80

Enter Titus.

TITUS

Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee.
 Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house.
 Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too.
 How like the Empress and her sons you are!
 Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor. 85
 Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
 For well I wot the Empress never wags
 But in her company there is a Moor;
 And, would you represent our Queen aright,
 It were convenient you had such a devil. 90
 But welcome as you are. What shall we do?

TAMORA (REVENGE)

To lovesick Dido's sad attending ear
 The story of that baleful burning night,
 When subtle Greeks surprised King Priam's Troy:
 Tell us what Sinon hath bewitched our ears, 85
 Or who hath brought the fatal engine in
 That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
 My heart is not compact of flint nor steel;
 Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
 But floods of tears will drown my oratory 90
 And break my utt'rance, even in the time
 When it should move ye to attend me most
 And force you to commiseration.
 Here's Rome's young captain, let him tell the tale:
 While I stand by and weep to hear him speak. 95

LUCIUS

Then, gracious auditory, be it known to you
 That Chiron and the damned Demetrius
 Were they that murderéd our Emperor's brother;
 And they it were that ravishéd our sister.
 For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded, 100
 Our father's tears despised, and basely cozened
 Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel out
 And sent her enemies unto the grave.
 Lastly, myself unkindly banishéd,
 The gates shut on me, and turned weeping out, 105
 To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
 Who drowned their enmity in my true tears,

 I am no baby, I, that with base prayers
 I should repent the evils I have done.

ROMEO AND JULIET

THE unauthorised Q<sup>1</sup> of this play was published, without entry in the Stationers' Registers, with title-page An Excellent conceited Tragedie of Romeo and Iuliet, As it hath been often (with great applause) plaid publicquely, by the right Honourable the L. of Hunsdon his Seruants. [Device] LONDON, Printed by Iohn Danter. 1597.<sup>1</sup> The type first used is changed at Sig. E (u iii 81) for a smaller type. Horizontal ornaments mark off scene, or episode, divisions at points corresponding to our III v 40, v iii 120 and 169; and at the end of our III iv, v; IV i, ii, iii, v; v i and ii. Q<sup>3</sup> appeared with title-page The Most Excellent and lamentable Tragedie, of Romeo and Iuliet. Newly corrected, augmented, and amended: As it hath bene sundry times publicquely acted, by the right Honourable the Lord Chamberlaine his Seruants. [Device] LONDON Printed by Thomas Creede, for Cuthbert Burby, and are to be sold at his shop neare the Exchange. 1599.<sup>2</sup> An entry in the Stationers' Registers dated 22 January, 1607, records Burby's transfer of his rights to Nicholas Linge, and another dated 19 November, 1607, the transfer from Linge to John Smethwick, who published Q<sup>3</sup> in 1609 and an undated Quarto, some copies of which carry in the title "Written by W. Shake-speare."<sup>3</sup> Smethwick published Q<sup>5</sup> with the ascription to Shakespeare in 1637. Q<sup>3</sup> seems to have been printed very largely from Shakespeare's MS. with some additional playhouse markings. Will Kemp's name was used for that of the character Peter, possibly by Shakespeare himself, in a stage-direction at IV v 99. Duplication of passages at II i 230, III iii 40, IV i 110, v iii 102, 108, are attributable to the author's changes in course of writing, where old and new texts have both inadvertently got printed.<sup>4</sup> Q<sup>3</sup> was based on Q<sup>2</sup>, and Q<sup>4</sup> and F<sup>1</sup> were based on Q<sup>3</sup>. Q<sup>1</sup> is some two-thirds of the length of Q<sup>3</sup>, due in part to deliberate cuts for performance,<sup>5</sup> and differs from it in many respects. Fleay considered that Q<sup>1</sup> contained remains of an older play by Peele, which Shakespeare revised; Robertson describes Peele as one of the original draughtsmen of the play; and Grant White thought Q<sup>1</sup> the imperfect version of a play in which Shakespeare collaborated and which he afterwards revised.<sup>6</sup> That Q<sup>3</sup> is a revision by is substantially given in Q<sup>1</sup>, but that it was used, as Greg had noted, for assistance in setting up a few early passages in Q<sup>1</sup>.<sup>1</sup> William Bracy in 1952 opposed the theory of memorial reconstruction as developed by Greg, A. Hart, Hoppe and others, and ascribed the special characteristics of Q<sup>1</sup> as, in the main, the result of playhouse adaptation and abridgment.<sup>2</sup> The relevant characteristics of Q<sup>1</sup> are cuts in the text, reduction in the number of players, replacement of text by descriptive stage-directions; record of actors' 'business' in stage-directions; gags, interjections and improvisations, metrical mutilation, paraphrase; transposition of words, phrases and lines; anticipation and recollection of passages spoken out of place; borrowings of lines from other plays; repetitions, mishearings, and non-Shakespearian verse supplied to replace omitted passages.<sup>3</sup> Thus Q<sup>2</sup> seems no revision of Q<sup>1</sup> but the authoritative text which could rightly claim to be "newly corrected, augmented and amended": nevertheless, as with other reconstructed quartos, the 'bad' text in places corrects the good one.<sup>4</sup> Early editors, however, adopted it in many passages where to-day the Q<sup>4</sup> readings would certainly stand.

In F<sup>1</sup> Romeo follows Titus Andronicus and precedes Timon. During the printing, difficulty seems to have arisen with Walley, the owner of the copyright of Troilus which was to have followed Romeo. Printing was held up and a final leaf containing on the recto the last page of Romeo and on the verso the first page of Troilus was cancelled. Five copies of F<sup>1</sup> contain, however, the cancelled leaf which thus presents the first printing of these F<sup>1</sup> textual fragments.<sup>5</sup> Comparison of the cancelled and standing pages in F<sup>1</sup> reveals many differences in punctuation and spelling and illustrates the freedom allowed the compositor.

No such tragedy as this, a tragedy of love couched largely in lyrical terms, had yet been seen in the theatre, and the two Choruses in sonnet form were meant to gain and keep the interest of the audience for the theme and method. The lyrical forms are continued in the sonnet dialogue at the lovers' first approach, I v 91-105; in Juliet's epithalamium which begins III ii; in the dialogued Aubade or Tagelied beginning III v;<sup>6</sup> and in Paris's rhymed sestet, by way of Juliet's epitaph, in v iii 12-17.<sup>7</sup> Accordingly, too, the proportion of full-line rhymes in the text is the greatest among the tragedies proper.<sup>8</sup> A fair proportion of the rhymed verse consists of run-on lines. Unevenly placed assonances and rhymes lend the blank verse, especially Juliet's speeches,<sup>1</sup> a subtle resonance and appeal. Shakespeare, bent on lyrical effect to suit his theme, occasionally endowed his blank verse with the embellishment of remote rhyme and assonance and his rhymed verse with freedom and power associated with blank verse. There is much contrast in the verse itself: the passing raptures of the lovers may be expressed in rhyme, but their profounder and lasting emotions are expressed in blank verse.<sup>2</sup> Taine calls their language roulades de rossignols.<sup>3</sup> The speeches of Escalus and Laurence have a note of measured dignity and formality, Capulet's of spasmodic querulousness, Mercutio's of facetious and quick-witted abandon, the Nurse's of patchwork garrulity. The various textual 'conceits' which Guizot, Mézières, Brandes and others<sup>4</sup> have recognised as of the Petrarchan, or sonnet, order have often been condemned; but they all serve a dramatic purpose. Romeo's often-decried antithetical utterances at i i 174-180—a sort of concentrated chiasmus construction of which there is a fuller example in Laurence's words at ii 17-22—accurately denote that his love for Rosaline is conventional and evanescent. Juliet's punning iteration of 'I' in iii ii 43-51 may be taken to be the natural reaction of a sensitive mind expectant of great happiness, suddenly smitten with intolerable disaster, and seeking an anodyne. Mercutio's Mab speech which Tucker Brooke thought "forcibly lugged in" and Bailey called "a tedious purple patch, entirely irrelevant,"<sup>5</sup> gives us information on this intrepid and satirical hedonist and scoffer whose rashness was to provoke the tragic events to come; and is, moreover, an 'atmosphere' speech corresponding in object with Romeo's later speech on the Apothecary, the one being part of the youthful urge and exuberance of the first half of the play and the other of the freakish fortunes and ghouliness of the second.

The play is exceedingly rich in soliloquies, both in their number and length, and they are of dramatic importance.<sup>6</sup> "Behind the rapid action of Romeo and Juliet," writes Arnold, "the soliloquies form a vibrant background of exalted passion."<sup>7</sup> To produce his effect of sudden and burning passion swiftly quenched by disaster, Shakespeare introduced again and again the note of speed by the use of words that denote pace and by repeated references to lightning and to gunfire. The play has many situations and passages resembling others in the

Sonnets.<sup>1</sup> The broken sequence in Juliet's speech in iv iii 36 f. is, like tangled utterances in other plays, the incoherence of distracted thought.<sup>2</sup>

Marston and Meres referred to the play in 1598 and Weever and The Return from Parnassus in 1599.<sup>3</sup> That the style of the play points to an early date of composition has been generally held. Mathew thought the play written in youth and revised later.<sup>4</sup> Tucker Brooke suggested that lack of knowledge of a great household (Capulet's) and lack of social experience on the author's part, which he thought obvious in the play, indicated early composition;<sup>5</sup> but the author wrote for dramatic purposes and not as a social historian. Fripp regards critics who see youthful or apprentice work in the play as "hopelessly astray" and dates it 1596.<sup>6</sup> The problem of date has been complicated by theories of revision and some have dated it "in its present form," Fleay and Adams in 1596-97 and Parrott in 1596.<sup>7</sup> The Nurse's reference in i ii 24 to the earthquake of eleven years back has been identified with the earthquakes of 1580 and 1584, and the play has been dated, either in its supposed first draft or as it stands, as written in 1591 and 1595.<sup>8</sup> The chronology within the play inspires no confidence in such a calculation. Old Capulet, for whom a crutch is appropriate (i i 74, 88) and who is obviously senile, has a wife aged twenty-eight or twenty-nine (i iii 73) and a Nurse, presumably some 60 years old, who fed Juliet, now fourteen, until she was weaned at the age of three, when the Nurse was about forty-nine. The Nurse's earthquake, even if the identification is correct, is poor evidence. Chambers dates the play as it was written, and as it now substantially exists in Q<sup>2</sup>, 1594-95; and McManaway reviewing the conclusions of Baldwin and others considers that either 1595 or 1596 would be acceptable.<sup>9</sup>

The story of two lovers parted by some great obstacle and brought to disaster through misadventure and hostile circumstance (but sometimes surviving it) has many forms in ancient and medieval romance. Such are the histories of Hero and Leander, Hæmon and Antigone, Pyramus and Thisbe, Sinon and Rhodanes,<sup>10</sup> Abrocomas and Anthia,<sup>11</sup> Troilus and Cressida, Floris and Blanchefleur, Tristan and Isolde,

Romeo and Juliet and many others. Before Shakespeare dealt with it the Romeo myth had grown by development and accretion through a succession of Italian and French narratives, beginning with Masuccio Salernitano in 1476 and proceeding through Da Porto (c. 1530), Clitia (in poetry, 1553), Bandello (1554), and the French Boaiſtuau (1559); the last of which accounts was transformed into an English poem by Arthur Brooke (1562) and was translated in prose by Painter in 1567. Shakespeare may have read Painter; he certainly used Brooke to some extent in The Two Gentlemen and to a great extent in Romeo. Brooke's Romeus and Juliet, in which Boaiſtuau's tale is developed in important respects, is a long, rambling, melodramatic poem in rhymed alexandrines and septenaries (Poulter's measure), affected in style, but not without merit.<sup>1</sup> In his Address to the Reader Brooke says: "I saw the same argument lately set forth on stage with more commendation than I can look for." Comparison of the incidents in the various versions leads one to believe that a lost version existed, possibly in play form, which contained episodes common to this lost version and one or more of the others;<sup>2</sup> and it may be that Brooke and even Shakespeare drew on it. What is clear is that in Brooke the Nurse and Apothecary come to life and scenes are given developing Romeus's ravings at the cell and talks between Romeus and the Nurse and the Nurse and Juliet about the marriage; but Brooke is very much a puritan: for him the lovers "thrall" themselves "to unhonest desire" and Laurence is a superstitious friar, one of "the naturally fit instruments of unchastity."<sup>3</sup> Shakespeare compressed the time of action from nine months to less than six days; he developed the soliloquies for dramatic purposes; he made Paris a suitor to Juliet before she met Romeo; he created Mercutio and rearranged the duel with Tybalt, giving Romeo ample provocation; he brought Tybalt to the ball and Paris at the end to the tomb, there introducing Tybalt's corpse; he made the Nurse and Apothecary new incarnations of important dramatic significance; he endowed the Friar with morality and wisdom and lent him nobility; he ennobled Paris; he reduced Juliet's age from sixteen to fourteen; he transformed unchaste desire into pure and rapturous passion expressed in a language such as never yet had been uttered in the drama of the world.

Ph.*, 1906, iv 75-120; Chiarini's Romeo e Giulietta, Firenze, 1906; Fischer's Quellen, Bonn, 1922; and Intr. to Romeus. <sup>1</sup> Brooke and Painter are reprinted in Collier, vol. ii; in Hazlitt's Sh. Lib., Pt. I, vol. i; in Daniel, op. cit.; and Brooke is reprinted also in Romeus. <sup>2</sup> Including the collateral Burglipha and Halquadrich par Sevin, 1541-42; La Hadriana da Luigi Groto, 1578; and Struijs Romeo en Juliette, 1630: on these see authorities in footnote 11, pp. 119, 120 above; also Romeo and Juliet, ed. Maurice Jones, London, 1921, containing facsimiles of da Porto, English translation and Introduction. <sup>3</sup> Romeus, lxvi. This is in Brooke's preface To the Reader. In the text Laurence is much truer to the traditional type of virtuous and wise friar.

The play may be, and has been, discussed as a battle between Love and Death:<sup>1</sup> nevertheless, love and death are not here exterior entities as in Soliman and Perseda (c. 1589-92), but powerful forces within the souls of men. Nor is Fortune here an Ate urging men to discord and rashness, or a Nemesis of inexorable retribution, or Moirai that encompassed gods and men; rather that medieval fiction, with her wheel ever turning, which represented mutation, rise and decline, in mortal affairs, but which was never dissociated in the medieval conception from human cause and provocation. It is partly for this reason that criticism of Romeo in terms of classical drama or neo-Aristotelian principle fails to do it justice. Shakespeare in the mouth of Polonius repudiated hard-and-fast categories in drama and if this is tragedy, as Quartos and Folios call it, it is tragedy sui generis and can stand alone. In it the Shakespearian method, increasingly employed as the plays proceed, is employed in fullness for the first time. The dramatist sees his dramatic fable as the interworking of collateral but opposite principles, operating at one time in concord and another in conflict, but all conducing, given the human factors, to an inevitable end. Here we see in human action the contrast and interplay of life and death, light and darkness, age and youth, law and discord, beauty and decay, comedy and tragedy, laughter and tears, love and hate. The pure emotions of the lovers are set against the carnal indelicacies of the Nurse and Mercutio. The womb of Earth and the grave are one (II iii 10); virtue and vice are as use is made of them (II iii 21); the flowers of finest aroma are poison-giving; within the heart of the bud the canker lies (I i 149). The verbal antitheses of Laurence, Capulet, Romeo and Juliet herself are expressions of this antithetic principle in all nature.<sup>2</sup> The characters themselves can be matched and differentiated in this same complementary manner. Flat 'humorous' characters are never found in Shakespeare. His people have the diversity and inconsistency of life. Juliet is at once an innocent girl and a ripening woman; she displays alternately modest hesitancy and bold resolution; faithfulness and considerable powers of deception; a singular force of imagination, such that Mrs. Jameson said that "she speaks in pictures"; an unflinching realism and will-power which drive her to accomplish her purpose. Romeo is impetuous, but also constant, yet for all his constancy and courage, he is emotionally unstable, and loves life and love so well that he readily embraces death. One could analyse in considerable detail the diverse qualities of all the characters; but in conclusion it should be noted that the tragic crisis is provoked not by some flaw or some hamartia in the characters, but from the sum of their potentialities, from their virtues as well as their failings, for in this play as in life the good and the bad work together. It is this which makes the tragedy inevitable, not merely any conventional theme of family enmity or personal failing: and it is this, with the magnificent poetry spoken by the two lovers, which has made it the most moving love-story in the literature of the world.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Feuillerat's conclusions on the nature and relations of the Quartos and Folio (1953) differ from any given above. There was, he assumes, a rhymed play, written about 1562, which was recast by author 'A' (see our vol. ii, p. 242); which recast play Shakespeare revised later in Acts I and II, and slightly in III-V. The revised text was transcribed by Crane, and provided copy for Q<sup>1</sup>. This text was set aside when Shakespeare undertook radical revision, for which, as basis, he used the company's prompt book, and not Crane's MS.; and he then thoroughly revised Acts III-V, employing loose sheets for the purpose. This mixed text, with its second Shakespeare revision, touched up slightly by Crane, was handed, probably by the players themselves, to the printers for Q<sup>2</sup>; and a copy of it became the new prompt book. F, based on Q<sup>2</sup>, is improved only in punctuation and precision of stage directions; and here again, the hand of Crane is visible. (Feuillerat: C, 280-328.) The evidence for this complex history is extremely debatable.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ] First given, imperfectly, by Rowe. Escalus is the Latinised form of the name of the historic Bartolomeo della Scala (or Scaliger), called Seigneur de l'Escale or le Seigneur Barthelemy de l'Escale in Boaistuau, Escalus in Brooke, and Senior Escala or lord Bartholomew of Escala in Painter and Prince Eskales in Q<sup>8</sup>. Petruchio is usually omitted from the Dramatis Personæ: he is mentioned at i v 129 and appears in person with Tybalt at iii i 33, but is mute. At iv iv 5 Capulet calls either his wife or the Nurse by the name of Angelica, which of the two is uncertain.

THE PROLOGUE

Chorus.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
 In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
 From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
 Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
 From forth the fatal loins of these two foes 5
 A pair of star-crossed lovers take their life;
 Whose misadventured piteous overthrows
 Doth with their death bury their parents' strife.
 The fearful passage of their death-marked love,
 And the continuance of their parents' rage, 10
 Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
 Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
 The which if you with patient ears attend,
 What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend. Exit.

A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad,
 Where, underneath the grove of sycamore 115
 That westward rooteth from the city's side,
 So early walking did I see your son.
 Towards him I made, but he was ware of me
 And stole into the covert of the wood.
 I, measuring his affections by my own, 120
 Which then most sought where most might not be found,
 Being one too many by my weary self,
 Pursued my humour, not pursuing his,
 And gladly shunned who gladly fled from me.

MONTAGUE

Many a morning hath he there been seen, 125
 With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
 Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
 But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
 Should in the farthest east begin to draw
 The shady curtains from Aurora's bed, 130
 Away from light steals home my heavy son,
 And private in his chamber pens himself,
 Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
 And makes himself an artificial night.
 Black and portentous must this humour prove, 135
 Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

BENVOLIO

My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

I neither know it nor can learn of him.

ROMEO

Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still, 165

Should without eyes see pathways to his will!

Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

Why, then, O brawling love! O loving hate! 170

O anything, of nothing first create!

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is! 175

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

BENVOLIO

No, coz, I rather weep.

ROMEO

BENVOLIO

At thy good heart's oppression.

ROMEO

Why, such is love's transgression.

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast, 180

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest

With more of thine. This love that thou hast shown

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke made with the fume of sighs;

Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes; 185

Being vexed, a sea nourished with lovers' tears.

What is it else? A madness most discreet,

A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;
For beauty, starved with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

LADY CAPULET

This is the matter. Nurse, give leave awhile,
 We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again:
 I have remembered me, thou'st hear our counsel. 10
 Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age.

NURSE

Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

LADY CAPULET

She's not fourteen.

NURSE

I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,—
 And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,— She's not fourteen. How long is it now 15
 To Lammastide?

LADY CAPULET A fortnight and odd days.

NURSE

Even or odd, of all days in the year,
 Come Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen.
 Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—
 Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God: 20
 She was too good for me:—but, as I said,
 On Lammas Eve at night shall she be fourteen;
 That shall she, marry: I remember it well.
 'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
 And she was weaned,—I never shall forget it— 25
 Of all the days of the year, upon that day:
 For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,
 Sitting in the sun under the dovehouse wall.
 My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
 Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said, 30
 When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple
 Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool,
 To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug!

Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh
 To think it should leave crying, and say 'Ay.'

What say you? Can you love the gentleman? 80
 This night you shall behold him at our feast.
 Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,
 And find delight writ there with beauty's pen.
 Examine every married lineament,
 And see how one another lends content; 85
 And what obscured in this fair volume lies
 Find written in the margent of his eyes.
 This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
 To beautify him, only lacks a cover.
 The fish lives in the sea; and 'tis much pride 90
 For fair without the fair within to hide.

 That in gold clasps locks in the golden story.
 So shall you share all that he doth possess,
 By having him making yourself no less. 95

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six other Maskers, Torchbearers.

ROMEO

What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we on without apology?

BENVOLIO

The date is out of such prolixity.
 We'll have no Cupid hoodwinked with a scarf,
 Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, 5
 Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;
 Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
 After the prompter, for our entrance;
 But, let them measure us by what they will,
 We'll measure them a measure, and be gone. 10

ROMEO

Give me a torch. I am not for this ambling;
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

MERCUTIO

Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

ROMEO

Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes
 With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead 15
 So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.

MERCUTIO

And soar with them above a common bound.

Chorus.

Now old desire doth in his deathbed lie,
And young affection gaps to be his heir;
That fair for which love groaned for and would die,
With tender Juliet matched, is now not fair.
Now Romeo is beloved and loves again, 5
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
But to his foe supposed he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks.
Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear; 10
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new beloved anywhere.
But passion lends them power, time means, to meet,
Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet. Exit.

This cannot anger him. 'Twould anger him
 To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle
 Of some strange nature, letting it there stand 25
 Till she had laid it and conjured it down:
 That were some spite. My invocation
 Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name
 I conjure only but to raise up him.

BENVOLIO

Come, he hath hid himself among these trees, 30
 To be consorted with the humorous night.
 Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

MERCUTIO

If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
 Now will he sit under a medlar tree,
 And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit 35
 As maids call medlars when they laugh alone.
 O, Romeo, that she were, O, that she were
 An open et cætera, thou a pop'rin pear!
 Romeo, good night! I'll to my truckle-bed:
 This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep. 40

The exact coincidence of the readings in Q<sup>1</sup> and Q<sup>2</sup>, with a colon, means that the printer of Q<sup>2</sup>, for some reason, used a copy of Q<sup>1</sup> to assist in setting up his text. ROMEO (coming forward)

He jests at scars that never felt a wound.

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun! 45
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon
Who is already sick and pale with grief
That thou her maid art far more fair than she.
Be not her maid, since she is envious:
Her vestal livery is but sick and green, 50
And none but fools do wear it. Cast it off.
It is my lady! O, it is my love!
O, that she knew she were!
She speaks, yet she says nothing. What of that?
Her eye discourses: I will answer it. 55
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks.
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do intreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head? 60
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,
As daylight doth a lamp. Her eyes in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright
That birds would sing and think it were not night.
See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand! 65
O, that I were a glove upon that hand,

JULIET

Ay me!

ROMEO

She speaks.

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

JULIET

O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

ROMEO (aside)

Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

JULIET

'Tis but thy name that is my enemy:
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? That which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet:
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo called,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name,
And for thy name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

So stumblest on my counsel?

ROMEO By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am.
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee.
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

JULIET

My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words 100
Of thy tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound.
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

ROMEO

Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.

JULIET

How camest thou hither, tell me, and wherefore? 105
The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

ROMEO

With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls,
For stony limits cannot hold love out.
And what love can do, that dares love attempt: 110
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

JULIET

If they do see thee, they will murder thee.

ROMEO

I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes;
 And but thou love me, let them find me here.
 My life were better ended by their hate,
 Than death proroguéd, wanting of thy love.

JULIET

By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

ROMEO

By love, that first did prompt me to inquire:
 He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
 I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
 As that vast shore washed with the farthest sea,
 I should adventure for such merchandise.

JULIET

 Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
 For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.
 Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
 What I have spoke: but farewell compliment!
 Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say 'Ay,'
 And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear'st,
 Thou mayst prove false. At lovers' perjuries,
 They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
 If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully.
 Or if thou thinkest I am too quickly won,
 I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,
 So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.

From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels.
 Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye, 5
 The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
 I must up-fill this osier cage of ours
 With baleful weeds and precious-juicéd flowers.
 The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb:
 What is her burying grave, that is her womb. 10
 And from her womb children of divers kind
 We sucking on her natural bosom find;
 Many for many virtues excellent,
 None but for some, and yet all different.
 O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies 15
 In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities.
 For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
 But to the earth some special good doth give;
 Nor aught so good, but, strained from that fair use,
 Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse. 20
 Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,
 And vice sometime's by action dignified.

 And where the worser is predominant,
 Full soon the canker death eats up that plant. 30

ROMEO

Good morrow, father.

FRIAR LAURENCE Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
 Young son, it argues a distempered head
 So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed.
 Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye, 35
 And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
 But where unbruised youth with unstuffed brain
 Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign.
 Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
 Thou art up-roused with some distemp'rature; 40
 Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
 Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

ROMEO

That last is true: the sweeter rest was mine.

FRIAR LAURENCE

God pardon sin! Wast thou with Rosaline?

ROMEO

With Rosaline, my ghostly father? No! 45
 I have forgot that name and that name's woe.

FRIAR LAURENCE

That's my good son. But where hast thou been then?

Within thy help and holy physic lies.
I bear no hatred, blessed man, for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift: 55
Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

ROMEO

Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set 60
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet.
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combined, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage. When, and where, and how,
We met, we wooed and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Holy Saint Francis, what a change is here! 65
Is Rosaline, that thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? Young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine
Hath washed thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline! 70
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans yet ring in mine ancient ears.
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit 75
Of an old tear that is not washed off yet.
If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline.
And art thou changed? Pronounce this sentence then:
Women may fall when there's no strength in men. 80

MERCUTIO A challenge, on my life.

BENVOLIO Romeo will answer it.

MERCUTIO Any man that can write may answer a letter.

BENVOLIO Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

white wench's black eye; run through the ear with a love-song;
the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-

15

BENVOLIO Why, what is Tybalt?

MERCUTIO More than prince of cats. O, he's the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing pricksong, keeps time, distance and proportion; he rests his minim rests, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk

SCENE IV. VERONA. CAPULET'S ORCHARD.

Enter Juliet.

JULIET

The clock struck nine when I did send the Nurse;
In half an hour she promised to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so.
O, she is lame! Love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glides than the sun's beams, 5
Driving back shadows over louring hills.
Therefore do nimble-pinioned doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve 10
Is three long hours: yet she is not come.
Had she affections and warm youthful blood,
She would be as swift in motion as a ball.

JULIET

Now, good sweet Nurse,—O Lord, why lookest thou sad?

NURSE

Jesu, what haste? Can you not stay a while?
Do you not see that I am out of breath? 30

JULIET

How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good or bad? Answer to that: 35
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance.
Let me be satisfied, is't good or bad?

NURSE Well, you have made a simple choice! You know not how to choose a man. Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and 40 a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy, but I'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench. Serve God. What, have you dined at home?

JULIET

No, no: but all this did I know before. 45
What says he of our marriage? What of that?

NURSE

Lord, how my head aches! What a head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back o' t' other side,—ah, my back, my back!
Beshrew your heart for sending me about 50
To catch my death with jauncing up and down!

There stays a husband to make you a wife.
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks:
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news. 70

To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark.

ROMEO

Amen, amen! But come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight. 5
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,
It is enough I may but call her mine.

FRIAR LAURENCE

These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die; like fire and powder 10
Which as they kiss consume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.
Therefore love moderately: long love doth so.
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow. 15

Here comes the lady. O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint.
A lover may bestride the gossamer

MERCUTIO Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

BENVOLIO And what to?

MERCUTIO Nay, and there were two such, we should have none 15 shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes:
what eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy 20 head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before 25
Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband?
and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

BENVOLIO And I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

MERCUTIO The fee-simple! O simple! 30

With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bowed,
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen 150

Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends 155
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it. Romeo he cries aloud,

ways' Globe, Furness, Craig, Chambers, Dowden, Sampson, NCE, Houghton
runaway's Kittredge runaway Furness has twenty-nine close pages, pp. 367-395, containing the attempts at explanation, up to 1874, of this supposedly corrupt word runnawayes. Since then, many more have been added. Many are bizarre and incredible. Kittredge's runaway is based on Blackstone's run-away; and he interprets runaway eyes as "eyes that will not stay at home and attend to their own affairs, but are always gadding about and thus see many things that do not concern them." If that explains runaway, then runaways' may mean gadabouts'. This comes near the explanation of Patrick Muirson in 1853 that runaways means "persons going about on the watch." What is wanted is a contemporary explanation of runaways that fits the circumstances. In glossing the French transfuge Cotgrave explains:
A runne-away; one that runnes to, and sides with, a publicke enemy, i.e., a person become hostile or treacherous. This helps to explain Shakespeare's phrase. Runaways' eyes would mean the eyes of hostile or treacherous people.
 This is supported by Brooke's Romeus, the source of the play, where at the lovers' meeting Romeus expresses the wish to conceal their love from hostile people: "let be our busy care So wisely to direct our love, as no wight else be ware; Lest envious foes by force despoil our new delight . . ."
 (ll. 885-887). Kellner thinks Sh. had this passage in mind when writing runnawayes eyes. Campbell: TD, 124, explains the phrase much as we do.

By their own beauties ; or , if love be blind,
It best agrees with night . Come , civil night,	10
Thou sober-suited matron , all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Played for a pair of stainless maidenhoods.
Hood my unmanned blood bating in my cheeks
With thy black mantle , till strange love grown bold	15
Think true love acted simple modesty .
Come , night , come , Romeo , come , thou day in night ;
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Whiter than new snow upon a raven's back .
Come , gentle night , come , loving , black-browed night,	20
Give me my Romeo ; and , when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars ,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night ,
And pay no worship to the garish sun .	25
O , I have bought the mansion of a love ,
But not possessed it , and , though I am sold ,

JULIET

Ay me! what news? Why dost thou wring thy hands?

NURSE

Ah, weraday! He's dead, he's dead, he's dead.

We are undone, lady, we are undone.

Alack the day! He's gone, he's killed, he's dead.

JULIET

Can heaven be so envious?

NURSE

Romeo can,

40

Though heaven cannot. O Romeo, Romeo!

Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!

JULIET

What devil art thou that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roared in dismal hell.

Hath Romeo slain himself? Say thou but 'I,'

45

And that bare vowel 'I' shall poison more

Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice.

I am not I, if there be such an I,

Or those eyes shut, that makes thee answer 'I.'

If he be slain, say 'I,' or if not, 'no.'

50

Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.

NURSE

I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes—

God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:

A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;

Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaubed in blood,

55

All in gore blood. I swooned at the sight.

JULIET

 Is Romeo slaughtered, and is Tybalt dead? 65
 My dearest cousin, and my dearer lord?

That murdered me. I would forget it fain;
 But, O, it presses to my memory 110
 Like damnéd guilty deeds to sinners' minds.
 'Tybalt is dead, and Romeo banishéd.'
 That 'banishéd,' that one word 'banishéd,'
 Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death
 Was woe enough, if it had ended there; 115
 Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship,
 And needly will be ranked with other griefs,
 Why followed not, when she said 'Tybalt's dead,'
 Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
 Which modern lamentation might have moved ? 120
 But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,
 'Romeo is banishéd': to speak that word,
 Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
 All slain, all dead. 'Romeo is banishéd.'
 There is no end, no limit, measure, bound, 125
 In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.
 Where is my father, and my mother, Nurse ?

NURSE

Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse.
 Will you go to them ? I will bring you thither.

JULIET

Wash they his wounds with tears ? Mine shall be spent, 130
 When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
 Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguiled,
 Both you and I, for Romeo is exiled.
 He made you for a highway to my bed;
 But I, a maid, die maiden-widowéd. 135
 Come, cords; come, Nurse: I'll to my wedding-bed;
 And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead !

NURSE

Hie to your chamber. I'll find Romeo
 To comfort you. I wot well where he is.
 Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night. 140

SCENE III. VERONA. FRIAR LAURENCE'S CELL.

Enter Friar Laurence.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Romeo, come forth. Come forth, thou fearful man.
 Affliction is enamoured of thy parts,
 And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter Romeo.

ROMEO

Father, what news? What is the Prince's doom?

 That I yet know not?

FRIAR LAURENCE Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company.
 I bring thee tidings of the Prince's doom

ROMEO

What less than doomsday is the Prince's doom?

FRIAR LAURENCE

A gentler judgement vanished from his lips, 10
 Not body's death, but body's banishment.

ROMEO

Ha, banishment! Be merciful, say 'death';
 For exile hath more terror in his look,
 Much more than death. Do not say 'banishment.'

FRIAR LAURENCE

Here from Verona art thou banishéd. 15
 Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

ROMEO

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
 Hence banishéd is banished from the world,
 And world's exile is death. Then 'banishéd' 20
 Is death mis-termed. Calling death 'banishéd,'
 Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
 And smilest upon the stroke that murders me.

FRIAR LAURENCE

O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
 Thy fault our law calls death, but the kind Prince, 25
 Taking thy part, hath rushed aside the law,
 And turned that black word death to banishment.
 This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

ROMEO

'Tis torture, and not mercy. Heaven is here
 Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog 30
 And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
 Live here in heaven and may look on her,
 But Romeo may not. More validity,
 More honourable state, more courtship lives
 In carrion flies than Romeo. They may seize 35
 On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
 And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
 Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
 Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
 But Romeo may not: he is banishéd. 40

- Q<sup>1</sup> But Romeo may not he is banished.
Flies may doo this, but I from this must flye.
 Q<sup>a</sup> This may flies do, when I from this must flie,
And sayest thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not, he is banished.
Flies may do this, but I from this must flie:
They are freemen, but I am banished.

There is evident confusion in Q<sup>a</sup>. The last three lines were probably meant to replace the first line, and all got printed. The text in Ff is:

This may Flies doe, when I from this must flie,
And saist thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not, hee is banished.

Our textual arrangement follows the same line-order as that in Cam, Globe, Furness, Delius, Herford, Dowden, Sampson, Kittredge, NCE, with this difference, that for our Flies may do this, Cam, Furness, Dowden, Durham,

Flies may do this, but I from this must fly.
 They are free men, but I am banishéd.
 And sayst thou yet, that exile is not death?
 Hadst thou no poison mixed, no sharp-ground knife,
 No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean, 45
 But 'banishéd' to kill me?—'Banishéd'?
 O friar, the damnéd use that word in hell:
 Howling attends it. How hast thou the heart,
 Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
 A sin-absolver, and my friend professed, 50
 To mangle me with that word 'banishéd'?

FRIAR LAURENCE

Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak.

ROMEO

O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

FRIAR LAURENCE

I'll give thee armour to keep off that word:
 Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy, 55
 To comfort thee, though thou art banishéd.

ROMEO

Yet 'banishéd'? Hang up philosophy!
 Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
 Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
 It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more. 60

FRIAR LAURENCE

O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

ROMEO

How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

FRIAR LAURENCE

Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

And ill-beseeming beast in seeming both!
Thou hast amazed me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better tempered. 115
Hast thou slain Tybalt? Wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady that in thy life lives,
By doing damned hate upon thyself?

Fie, fie, thou shamest thy shape, thy love, thy wit;

 And usest none in that true use indeed
 Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit. 125
 Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
 Digressing from the valour of a man;
 Thy dear love sworn but hollow perjury,
 Killing that love which thou hast vowed to cherish;
 Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, 130
 Misshapen in the conduct of them both,
 Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,
 Is set afire by thine own ignorance,

 What, rouse thee, man! Thy Juliet is alive, 135
 For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead:
 There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
 But thou slewest Tybalt: there art thou happy.
 The law, that threatened death, becomes thy friend, 140
 And turns it to exile: there art thou happy.
 A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;
 Happiness courts thee in her best array;

 Thou pout'st upon thy fortune and thy love.
 Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable. 145

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.

CAPULET

Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily,
 That we have had no time to move our daughter.
 Look you, she loved her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
 And so did I. Well, we were born to die.
 'Tis very late: she'll not come down to-night. 5
 I promise you, but for your company,
 I would have been abed an hour ago.

PARIS

These times of woe afford no times to woo.
 Madam, good night: commend me to your daughter.

LADY CAPULET

I will, and know her mind early to-morrow: 10
 To-night she's mewed up to her heaviness.

CAPULET

Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
 Of my child's love. I think she will be ruled
 In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not.
 Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed; 15
 Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;
 And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—
 But, soft! what day is this?

PARIS

Monday, my lord.

CAPULET

Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon;
 O' Thursday let it be. O' Thursday, tell her, 20

JULIET

It is, it is! Hie hence, be gone, away!
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.
Some say the lark makes sweet division:
This doth not so, for she divideth us. 30
Some say the lark and loathéd toad change eyes:

LADY CAPULET
 Here comes your father: tell him so yourself,
 And see how he will take it at your hands. 125

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

CAPULET
 When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;
 But for the sunset of my brother's son
 It rains downright.
 How now! a conduit, girl? What, still in tears?
 Evermore show'ring? In one little body 130
 Thou counterfeits a bark, a sea, a wind.
 For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
 Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
 Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs,
 Who, raging with thy tears, and they with them, 135
 Without a sudden calm will overset
 Thy tempest-toss'd body. How now, wife!

Have you delivered to her our decree?

LADY CAPULET

Ay, sir, but she will none, she gives you thanks.
I would the fool were married to her grave!

CAPULET

Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.
How! will she none? Doth she not give us thanks?
Is she not proud? Doth she not count her blest,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

JULIET

Not proud you have, but thankful that you have.
Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful even for hate that is meant love.

CAPULET

How, how! how, how! chop-logic! What is this?
'Proud,' and 'I thank you,' and 'I thank you not';
And yet 'not proud.' Mistress minion, you,
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
To go with Paris to Saint Peter's Church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.
Out, you green-sickness carrion! Out, you baggage!
You tallow-face!

LADY CAPULET Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

JULIET

Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

 Romeo is banished, and all the world to nothing,
 That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;                      215
 Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
 Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
 I think it best you married with the County.
 O, he's a lovely gentleman!
 Romeo's a dishclout to him: an eagle, madam,                      220
 Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye
 As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
 I think you are happy in this second match,

Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue

I'll to the friar to know his remedy.

FRIAR LAURENCE

On Thursday, sir? The time is very short.

My father Capulet will have it so,
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Uneven is the course: I like it not.

JULIET

O, Juliet, I already know thy grief:
It strains me past the compass of my wits.
I hear thou must, and nothing may proroque it,
On Thursday next be married to this County.

JULIET

Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it.
If in thy wisdom thou canst give no help,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,

Why, I am glad on't. This is well. Stand up.
This is as't should be. Let me see the County:
Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.
Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
All our whole city is much bound to him.

JULIET

Nurse, will you go with me into my closet
To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

35

LADY CAPULET

No, not till Thursday: there is time enough.

CAPULET

Go, Nurse, go with her: we'll to church to-morrow.

Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.

LADY CAPULET

We shall be short in our provision.
'Tis now near night.

CAPULET

Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife.
Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her.
I'll not to bed to-night. Let me alone:
I'll play the housewife for this once. What, ho!
They are all forth. Well, I will walk myself
To County Paris, to prepare up him
Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light
Since this same wayward girl is so reclaimed.

 Which, well thou knowest, is cross and full of sin. 5

LADY CAPULET

What, are you busy, ho? Need you my help?

JULIET

No, madam, we have culled such necessities
 As are behoveful for our state to-morrow.
 So please you, let me now be left alone,
 And let the Nurse this night sit up with you, 10
 For I am sure you have your hands full all
 In this so sudden business.

LADY CAPULET

Good night:

Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need.

JULIET

Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.
 I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, 15
 That almost freezes up the heat of life.
 I'll call them back again to comfort me.
 Nurse!—What should she do here?
 My dismal scene I needs must act alone.

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonoured,
 Because he married me before to Romeo?
 I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not,
 For he hath still been tried a holy man.
 How if, when I am laid into the tomb, 30
 I wake before the time that Romeo
 Come to redeem me? There's a fearful point.
 Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,
 To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,
 And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes? 35
 Or, if I live, is it not very like,
 The horrible conceit of death and night,
 Together with the terror of the place,—
 As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
 Where for this many hundred years the bones 40
 Of all my buried ancestors are packed;
 Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
 Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they say,
 At some hours in the night spirits resort;—
 Alack, alack, is it not like that I, 45
 So early waking, what with loathsome smells
 And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,
 That living mortals hearing them run mad:—
 O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
 Environéd with all these hideous fears? 50
 And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
 And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
 And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
 As with a club, dash out my desp'rate brains?
 O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost 55
 Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
 Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay!

Dowden, Sampson, Kittredge, NCE, Houghton. Chambers, Durham follow Q<sup>1</sup>. The objection to Q<sup>1</sup> is first that it is a derived text, and secondly that in the circumstances I come is quite inappropriate. Knight raised this latter point and followed Q<sup>2</sup> here. Dyce disputed Knight's reasoning and pointed out that heeres drinke in Q<sup>2</sup> was a distorted stage-direction (Here drink.) which had got into the speech. "Delius and others have agreed with this and in his Stratford edn. Editors have mostly adopted the hyphen and, as Onions remarks, have treated hood as a suffix forming abstract nouns and here forming the abstract 'jealousy.' Ulrici suggested that jealous hood was two words, hood meaning 'cap,' and the phrase being equivalent to a jealous old woman. Kellner, 13, maintains that hood or hud meant a fool and quoted Latimer's Sermons (ed. Arber, 84): "What ye brain-sick fools, ye hoddie pecks, ye diddy-polls, ye huds . . ." Kittredge: SP, 753, glosses jealous hood as one who wears jealousy like a hood, and quotes Greene's Mamillia, "the olde man . . . will couer his head with a ielous cap . . ." Accurst, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!
 Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
 In lasting labour of his pilgrimage! 45
 But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
 But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
 And cruel Death hath caught it from my sight!

 O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!
 Dead art thou! Alack, my child is dead;
 And with my child my joys are buried!

FRIAR LAURENCE

Peace, ho, for shame! Confusion's cure lives not 65
 In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
 Had part in this fair maid: now heaven hath all,
 And all the better is it for the maid.
 Your part in her you could not keep from death;
 But heaven keeps his part in eternal life. 70
 The most you sought was her promotion,
 For 'twas your heaven she should be advanced;
 And weep ye now, seeing she is advanced
 Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
 O, in this love, you love your child so ill 75
 That you run mad, seeing that she is well.
 She's not well married that lives married long,
 But she's best married that dies married young.
 Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
 On this fair corse, and, as the custom is, 80
 And, in her best array, bear her to church;
 For though fond nature bids us all lament,
 Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

CAPULET

All things that we ordained festival
 Turn from their office to black funeral: 85
 Our instruments to melancholy bells;

ACT V

SCENE I. MANTUA. A STREET.

Enter Romeo.

ROMEO
If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne,
And all this day an unaccustomed spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts. 5
I dreamt my lady came and found me dead—
Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think!—
And breathed such life with kisses in my lips
That I revived and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possessed, 10
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

BALTHASAR

Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.
 Her body sleeps in Capels' monument,
 And her immortal part with angels lives. 20
 I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
 And presently took post to tell it you.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
 Let's see for means.—O mischief, thou art swift 35
 To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
 I do remember an apothecary,
 And hereabouts a dwells, which late I noted
 In tattered weeds, with overwhelming brows,
 Culling of simples. Meagre were his looks; 40
 Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
 And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
 An alligator stuffed and other skins
 Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves
 A beggarly account of empty boxes, 45
 Green earthen pots, bladders and musty seeds,
 Remnants of packthread and old cakes of roses,
 Were thinly scattered, to make up a show.
 Noting this penury, to myself I said,
 An if a man did need a poison now, 50
 Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
 Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
 O, this same thought did but forerun my need,
 And this same needy man must sell it me.
 As I remember, this should be the house. 55
 Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.
 What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Friar John.

FRIAR JOHN

Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar Laurence.

FRIAR LAURENCE

This same should be the voice of Friar John.
 Welcome from Mantua. What says Romeo?
 Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

FRIAR JOHN

Going to find a barefoot brother out, 5
 One of our order, to associate me,
 Here in this city visiting the sick,
 And finding him, the searchers of the town,
 Suspecting that we both were in a house
 Where the infectious pestilence did reign, 10
 Sealed up the doors and would not let us forth,
 So that my speed to Mantua there was stayed.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

FRIAR JOHN

I could not send it, here it is again,—
 Nor get a messenger to bring it thee, 15
 So fearful were they of infection.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Unhappy fortune! By my brotherhood,
 The letter was not nice, but full of charge
 Of dear import, and the neglecting it
 May do much danger. Friar John, go hence. 20
 Get me an iron crow and bring it straight
 Unto my cell.

FRIAR JOHN

Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. Exit.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Now must I to the monument alone:

Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty.
 Thou art not conquered: beauty's ensign yet
 Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks, 95
 And death's pale flag is not advanced there.
 Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
 O, what more favour can I do to thee
 Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain
 To sunder his that was thine enemy? 100
 Forgive me, cousin! Ah, dear Juliet,
 Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
 That unsubstantial death is amorous,
 And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
 Thee here in dark to be his paramour? 105
 For fear of that, I still will stay with thee,
 And never from this palace of dim night
 Depart again. Here, here will I remain
 With worms that are thy chambermaids. O, here
 Will I set up my everlasting rest, 110
 And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
 From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look your last!
 Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you
 The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
 A dateless bargain to engrossing death! 115
 Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!

FRIAR LAURENCE

Saint Francis be my speed! How oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's there?

BALTHASAR

Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

FRIAR LAURENCE

Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,

 You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
 Betrothed and would have married her perforce
 To County Paris. Then comes she to me,
 And with wild looks bid me devise some mean
 To rid her from this second marriage, 240
 Or in my cell there would she kill herself.
 Then gave I her, so tutored by my art,
 A sleeping potion, which so took effect
 As I intended, for it wrought on her
 The form of death. Meantime I writ to Romeo, 245
 That he should hither come as this dire night,
 To help to take her from her borrowed grave,
 Being the time the potion's force should cease.
 But he which bore my letter, Friar John,
 Was stayed by accident, and yesternight 250
 Returned my letter back. Then all alone
 At the prefixed hour of her waking
 Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
 Meaning to keep her closely at my cell
 Till I conveniently could send to Romeo. 255
 But when I came, some minute ere the time
 Of her awak'ning, here untimely lay
 The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
 She wakes, and I entreated her come forth,
 And bear this work of heaven with patience; 260
 But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
 And she too desperate would not go with me,
 But, as it seems, did violence on herself.

APPENDIX

ACT II SCENE I OF THE PLAY

Editors, including Furness, have widely adopted Cam's stage-direction for  $\Pi$  i, "A lane by the wall of Capulet's orchard." In Sc. ii the setting then changes to Capulet's orchard. Early editors for Sc. i printed "An open place, adjoining Capulet's garden"; and for Sc. ii "Capulet's garden." Sc. ii in these cases begins at our  $\Pi$  i 43. As Delius noted, there is no indication in Q F of a reappearance of Romeo corresponding to the editors' Enter Romeo at the start of their  $\Pi$  ii; and his first words there are He jests at scars that never felt a wound, which form the second line of a rhyming couplet, the first of which is spoken by Benvolio at the end of the editorial  $\Pi$  i. This split was not intended. While Delius has a Sc. ii and thus splits the couplet, with a new entry for Romeo, he has no new setting. Clearly the orchard scene (usually  $\Pi$  i and ii) was all one. Granville Barker has remarks to this effect (G.B. 2, p. 9 f.). Sampson's arrangement is that the Scene represents Capulet's garden with a portion of the adjoining street, and a portion of the garden-wall dividing them: but he still has a Sc. ii without change of setting. The wall, which Juliet says is high and hard to climb, is the difficulty. A similar problem crops up again in various Elizabethan plays, for instance in 1 Henry VI  $\Pi$  i 33, where the defeated French leap over the walls in their shirts. (On 'walls' in Elizabethan plays, see Chambers: ES, iii 36, 39, 44, 54, 72, 96, 106, 107.) Perhaps in Romeo a token wall was provided on the stage. The setting would require the stage balcony for Juliet's balcony, some trees in tubs where Romeo hides and overhears the talk of Mercutio and Benvolio, and a token wall easy to be overleapt: or probably the wall was supplied by the imagination of the audience. Cam supposes that the wall was perhaps "represented as dividing the stage, so that the audience could see Romeo on one side and Mercutio on the other."

JULIUS CÆSAR

Julius Cæsar was first printed in the Folio of 1623,<sup>1</sup> where it follows Timon and precedes Macbeth. In the 'Catalogue' preceding the plays it is called The Life and death of Julius Cæsar. The title before the text and that of the headlines is The Tragedie of Julius Cæsar. The entry in the Stationers' Registers, dated 8 November, 1623, which covers the publication of the Folio, mentions Julius Cæsar among the Tragedies.<sup>2</sup> The Folio text is divided into Acts, but no Scenes are marked except in Actus Primus. Scæna Prima. The text is unusually accurate and is probably derived from a prompt copy or a copy of it. The Cambridge editors thought that the fair text meant the use of the author's MS.<sup>3</sup> Greg disagrees.<sup>4</sup> The text is rather short, due perhaps to pruning in the theatre, having 2,477 lines in Chambers's tables and being eighth among the plays in order of length. There is a small proportion of prose, little rhyme, and a great preponderance of blank verse.<sup>5</sup> The verse suits the classical theme: it is adequate but economical, elegant, lucid, flexible and coherent, without complexity and that concentration of meaning into words and phrases beyond their normal carrying capacity which is to be found in later plays. The text is one of the richest so far in double endings, leading up in this respect to later dramas. Light endings (ten) are the most numerous so far in order of date and there is a marked increase in the number of mid-line pauses.<sup>6</sup> Straightforward as the verse is, it is not without subtlety. Antony's great oration is superb cumulative rhetoric: it consists largely of end-stopped lines with rare mid-line pauses, natural to a man hesitant amidst a great crisis; yet the eloquent effectiveness of the lines warns us that the apparent hesitancy is a calculated quality on Antony's part. Brutus's speech, to set off the studied eloquence of Antony's which is to follow, is in prose, is a logical intellectual appeal typical of Brutus, and is the least calculated to move, as Antony does, the emotions of the plebeians. Some of the characters, particularly Cæsar, often speak of themselves in the third person, which introduces a note of grandiloquence. There is little humour: some in the crowd scenes; some, not devoid of pathos, in the talk between Portia and Lucius in II iv; some in IV iii where the unnamed poet intervenes in the generals' quarrel, but this is to show us that Cassius had a sense of humour and Brutus had none. Mythological allusions are few, in contradistinction to other Cæsar plays, particularly the earlier Cæsar's Revenge wherein they are superabundant.<sup>1</sup> Notwithstanding various anachronisms, like the famous striking clock, topical allusions are also infrequent.<sup>2</sup> Of all Shakespeare's plays, this play has fewest references to flower and vegetable life; and the animal life which is mentioned, the dogs of war, the fawning spaniel, wolf, ferret, adder, wasp, unicorn, bear, elephant and lion, are mostly of the hostile and predatory type.

There have been the inevitable attempts to establish multiple authorship in the play. William Wells's final theory (1923) was that Julius Cæsar is an old play by Marlowe, possibly assisted by Peele, revised by Shakespeare and finished by Beaumont.<sup>3</sup> Robertson (1922) supposed Shakespeare's play to be a reconstruction of part of a play in three parts in which Marlowe, Dekker, Munday, Chapman and others were concerned.<sup>4</sup> The play bears throughout the strong and unmistakable stamp of Shakespeare's authorship. The repeated and consistent play of irony from beginning to end, to which reference is made below, construction, characterisation and verse, indicate one sole hand at work. Fleay had a theory that the present text is an abridgment and remodelling of Shakespeare's play made by Jonson.<sup>5</sup> There is as little warrant for this hypothesis as for the idea of Fleay and others that Shakespeare helped Jonson to write Sejanus in 1602-3.<sup>6</sup> Jonson's criticism in Discoveries of Julius Cæsar, III i 47, 48, is dealt with in a footnote to that passage. The probability is that the text has been changed at that place by Shakespeare or another. Apparent allusions in Every Man Out of His Humour (1599-1600) to other passages at III i 77, III ii 104, 105, have some importance in fixing the date of our play and are dealt with in footnotes, as also is the supposed duplication in the text at IV iii 179.

Julius Cæsar was not mentioned in Meres's Palladis Tamia, 1598; but Thomas Platter of Basle recorded that on 21 September, 1599, at about 2 p.m., he and others crossed the Thames to the thatched building (streüwinen Dachhaus) and saw the tragedy of the first "Keyser Julio Caesare," played with at least (ohngefähr) fifteen characters, after which four players, two of whom were disguised as women, danced with elegance.<sup>7</sup> Mathew's idea that the play was a youthful production, revised later, is surely untenable.<sup>8</sup> The early editors tended to place the play late, Malone and Drake in 1607, and Knight among the latest plays.<sup>1</sup> Many later critics, largely persuaded that the play reflected the strife of the Essex rebellion, dated it 1601. Bailey described this political parallel as a will-o'-the-wisp and W. W. Lawrence and others, with reason, reject it.<sup>2</sup> Pearson, on the other hand, thinks the play we now have is very different, after Essex's rebellion, from that seen by Platter in 1599.<sup>3</sup> Furnivall, Ten Brink, Bailey and others adopt 1601; Brandes adopts not earlier than 1601; Neilson and Thorndike prefer before 1600.<sup>4</sup> Dowden, Boas, F. G. Stokes, MacCallum favour 1600-1; Chambers's date is 1599-1600; and Adams's 1598-9.<sup>5</sup> There is, however, a definite reference to the play in Weaver's Mirror of Martyrs published in 1601, but shown by Elze and Simpson to have been written in 1599;<sup>6</sup> and this, together with Platter's note and the apparent Jonsonian allusions in Every Man Out of His Humour, has led to a wide adoption of 1599. This agrees with the common view that the play followed Henry V and preceded Hamlet. 1599 is the date accepted by Elze, Fripp, Parrott, F. P. Wilson, Spencer, Fluchère and others.<sup>7</sup>

Shakespeare's main source for this play was North's translation of Amyot's French translation of Plutarch's Lives of Cæsar, Brutus and Antony, first published in 1579 and from 1595 printed by Shakespeare's Stratford friend, Richard Field. Plutarch's narratives, rendered in idiomatic English, where, as Stapfer remarks, history was already half turned into poetry, emphasise the clash of personalities and purposes, and are rich in striking anecdote. From them Shakespeare selected such incidents and passages as suited his dramatic purpose, in places adopting North's own words,<sup>8</sup> and interweaving the material drawn from the three Lives, with perhaps something from the Life of Cicero. Knight remarked that he elevated all he touched without destroying its identity.<sup>9</sup> Stapfer thought Antony's speech curiously like the translation of Appian published in 1578; and Tassin thinks Brutus's speech (iii ii 12 f.) somewhat indebted to Appian's narrative, and Antony's to Appian and Dio as well as Plutarch.<sup>10</sup> MacCallum

There were many earlier dramatisations of Cæsar's story, among them Marc-Antoine Muret's Latin tragedy Julius Cæsar of 1544;<sup>3</sup> Jacques Grévin's Senecan tragedy César, in French verse, 1561;<sup>4</sup> and Robert Garnier's verse Cornélie of 1574, of which a translation by Kyd appeared in 1594.<sup>5</sup> The academic Cæsar's Revenge (? 1592-6) had no apparent influence on other drama;<sup>6</sup> but Muret, under the influence of Seneca, and particularly his Hercules Oetæus, founded a dramatic tradition copied by his successors in which Cæsar spoke in a strain of egotistical self-assertion verging on braggartism which was similar to the form of arrogance that Marlowe associated with his tragic heroes, and which, in Marlowe, was held by Bernard Shaw to have affected Shakespeare's treatment of Cæsar.<sup>7</sup> In Cæsar's Revenge and the rhymed Julius Cæsar of Sir William Alexander, printed first in 1607<sup>8</sup> and based on the French dramas and Plutarch, this propensity is evident in exaggerated form. In Shakespeare it is under control. It has been compared with the ranting of Herod in the mystery plays: nevertheless, in the case of Cæsar it was not burlesque, but was taken by the audiences to be the appropriate expression of the exalted hero.<sup>9</sup>

Henslowe records two lost plays (or parts), I Cæsar and Pompey and 2 Cæsar and Pompey, played by the Admiral's men on 8 November, 1594, and 18 June, 1595.<sup>10</sup> Nothing more is known of these productions or their possible influence on Shakespeare; but Boecker and Sarrazin in 1913 independently called attention to similarities between Il Cesare Tragedia of Orlando Pescetti, printed in Verona in 1594, and Shakespeare's play.<sup>11</sup> Some are striking and some seem due to common use of Plutarch. Sarrazin supposed that Pescetti's play might have been translated or worked over by such a man as Anthony Munday and that Shakespeare may thus have known it. Whatever hints Shakespeare may have gleaned from other sources, Plutarch remains his principal source of information.

Shakespeare compressed the period of Plutarch's narrative to six days with intervals.<sup>12</sup> He concentrated the Triumph of Cæsar, the assassination, the speeches, the funeral, the arrival of Octavius and the flight of Brutus and Cassius into one day. He added Brutus's revelatory soliloquy before joining the conspirators in II i, and Antony's after the assassination. He changed Calpurnia's dream so as to make it prophetic. Cæsar's twenty-three wounds become thirty-three (V i 53). He introduced the phrase Et tu, Brute!<sup>1</sup> He enlarged the episode with Cinna the Poet. He brought the death of Portia forward to precede the Generals' quarrel, and introduced the scene with Titinius and Pindarus (IV ii). The two Battles of Philippi coalesce into one and Octavius, who was not there, is made to take part in it. Shakespeare's principal changes were in making Brutus's revengeful daimon the Ghost of Cæsar, in which, however, he was not original, for Cæsar's Ghost is even more active in the same way in Cæsar's Revenge. He presented a view of Cæsar new in some respects, showed him, in all his greatness, physically impaired, vain and superstitious. He omitted reference to unfavourable incidents in Brutus's career, increased his moral grandeur and idealised him; and he invented Lucius to emphasise Brutus's mildness. He showed Antony, after all his fine words, ready to embezzle money left by Cæsar. He caused Titinius to crown the dead Cassius at Philippi. It is especially significant that, contrary to common contemporary practice, the Plebeians have a part in this play as the general public body which has to be considered in the struggle of contending systems for the government of the Roman world.

Shakespeare disliked restriction of drama to rigid categories. If we are to define Julius Cæsar, we must call it, in the phrase of Polonius, tragical-historical. It is a transition play leading from the Histories, which had (apart from Henry VIII) been completed in Henry V, to the Tragedies. Shakespeare treats Plutarch much as he had treated Holinshed and Hall. In this play, as in the Histories, one is made aware of the great political forces and the great issues involved: in the Histories, the long-drawn struggle between York and Lancaster culminating in the Tudor settlement, and in Julius Cæsar the clash between Republican and Despotic powers ending in the triumph of Octavius. Monarchs of various moulds had played principal, and sometimes tragic, rôles in the historic series: in this play Shakespeare had to deal with the "most high, most mighty and most puissant Cæsar," the Colossus, "bold, loyal and loving" conqueror and emperor, not only as his character was recorded in Plutarch and displayed in drama, but also as popular tradition had preserved the memory of him: for the name of Cæsar was as familiar to Shakespeare's audience as that of Elizabeth herself. Cæsar's traditional history may be read in the pages of Gundolf.<sup>2</sup> Cæsar had been for centuries a central figure in myth and faïry lore, a hero of romance and chivalry, the genius loci of many places, necromancer, lord of battle, magnanimous conqueror, sage, man of letters, demigod, identified with Rome and the greatness of Rome: and also tyrant. Something of all this was known to Shakespeare's audience; and to it may be added such of the literary tradition, through Dante, Petrarch and others, as affected the popular arts and popular opinion. In this play Shakespeare's plan could not be to show Cæsar in his old executive strength and his glory; and that composite Cæsar to be found in the pages of Mommsen, John Buchan and other moderns, derived from the whole body of classical letters, was not yet born. Shakespeare's Cæsar, the personification of Roman greatness, is physically impaired, still master of circumstance but marred by time: all the more so to emphasise for dramatic purposes that the system was greater than the man, that the destruction of Cæsar's person could not destroy his policy, diminish his fame, impair his influence or demolish the political foundation which he laid.

By means of repeated reference on the part of the principal characters to Cæsar's greatness, and Cæsar's own grandiloquence,<sup>1</sup> Shakespeare evoked in the minds of his audience, even with the last phase of Cæsar before them, enough of the matter of common tradition to enable them to see the man in a wider aspect of his whole life and accomplishments. Brutus was a different matter. If Cæsar's fame had never really been free from the taint of tyranny, Brutus had never been really absolved from ingratitude, treason and regicide. While Dante's Cæsar, nobly praised in Canto VI of the Paradiso, is among the honoured heroes of antiquity in the noble Castle of the Inferno's first circle, Brutus, Cassius and Judas Iscariot are torn as traitors in the mouths of triple-faced Satan in the ice-bound depth of Hell.<sup>2</sup> Through his resistance to tyranny and his association with the much admired Cicero, Brutus acquired, principally through the good offices of Petrarch, a renewed grandeur; but never was he free, especially in Elizabethan eyes, from the blemishes of ingratitude and the murder of his friend and ruler. Nemesis in the play arises largely from his very virtues. He is chosen leader by the conspirators for his noble race and his unchallenged rectitude. He is so sure of honour in others that he forbids the conspirators to take an oath. He would, if he could, secure the conspirators' aim without violence to Cæsar; and in excess of patriotic idealism he condemns Cæsar on purely hypothetical grounds. He trustingly refuses to permit the execution of Antony which Cassius discreetly urges. He generously allows Antony to speak at the funeral when Cassius would refuse. He condemns the forced levy of money, but requires money of Cassius when so levied. He rejects Cassius's sensible plan for battle but fails, through sheer zeal, to co-operate during its progress. Thus he brings destruction on himself and his cause, on Portia and his comrades and on the optimates proscribed by the Triumvirate; and he succeeds only in founding more surely the imperial régime which he set out to demolish. Through all, such was his idealism, he had no real plan for Rome: the death of Cæsar finds him and his friends quite unprepared with any scheme for control. Jack Cade had better ideas.

The play is shot through with dramatic irony. It is ironic that Brutus's optimism and moral purpose are the prelude to reverses; that he should count Antony as negligible; that Cæsar's deafness should supervene on his boastings. It is ironical that at the conspirators' meeting, Casca should settle the dispute on where the sun would rise (like the dawn of a new era) by pointing with his sword towards the Capitol (π i 105 f.), only to point towards disaster. It is ironical that Cæsar should entertain the conspirators before going to death at their hands; that he should bid Trebonius "Be near me, that I may remember you." Cassius's offer to Antony that he should share in the disposal of honours, uttered with sarcasm, is ironic because Antony's 'disposal' when he had the opportunity was peculation and the slaughter of patricians. Antony's disclaimer of oratory and reiteration of 'honourable men' are irony. The desire of the Plebeians to make Brutus Cæsar is bitter irony for Brutus. It is ironical that Brutus wished to destroy Cæsar's spirit (his imperialism) without shedding his blood; but sheds his blood and is haunted by Cæsar's spirit. It is ironical that the practical but amoral Cassius with his vicious hatred could have succeeded where the moral idealist, Brutus, completely failed; and that Cassius should die upon the sword with which he smote Cæsar. And the greatest irony of all is that Brutus established for centuries the political system that he sacrificed so much to destroy.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ] First given imperfectly by Rowe and more fully by Theobald. There is in F<sup>1</sup>, both in stage-directions and the text, confusion between the romance ending of proper names in -o and the classical ending in -us. Varrus appears for Varro in iv iii 243. Antonio appears as well as Antony with genitives Antonio's, Antonies. Likewise we have Octavius with genitives Octavio's, Octavius. Claudio appears for Claudius and Flavius has also the form Flauio. Casca is spelt Caska and Calpurnia is spelt Calphurnia. Marullus appears as Murellus and Murrellus. There seems to be confusion between Lucius and Lucilius in iv ii 50, 52. Two officers, Labeo and Flavius, are addressed in v iii 108.

FLAVIUS

Hence! Home, you idle creatures, get you home!
Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk
Upon a labouring day without the sign
Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou? 5

CARPENTER Why, sir, a carpenter.

MARULLUS

Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?
You, sir, what trade are you?

COBBLER Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as 10
you would say, a cobbler.

MARULLUS But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

COBBLER A trade, sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience, which is indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

 Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
 Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires: 30
 I'll leave you.

CASSIUS

Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
 I have not from your eyes that gentleness
 And show of love as I was wont to have.
 You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand 35

 But let not therefore my good friends be grieved—
 Among which number, Cassius, be you one—
 Nor construe any further my neglect 45
 Than that poor Brutus with himself at war
 Forgets the shows of love to other men.

CASSIUS

Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
 By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried
 Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations. 50
 Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

BRUTUS

No, Cassius, for the eye sees not itself
 But by reflection, by some other things.

CASSIUS

'Tis just.
 And it is very much lamented, Brutus, 55
 That you have no such mirrors as will turn
 Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
 That you might see your shadow. I have heard
 Where many of the best respect in Rome,
 Except immortal Cæsar, speaking of Brutus, 60
 And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
 Have wished that noble Brutus had his eyes.

BRUTUS

Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
 That you would have me seek into myself
 For that which is not in me? 65

CASSIUS

Therefore, good Brutus, be prepared to hear:
 And since you know you cannot see yourself
 So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
 Will modestly discover to yourself

CASSIUS

Then must I think you would not have it so.

BRUTUS

I would not, Cassius, yet I love him well.
 But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
 What is it that you would impart to me?
 If it be aught toward the general good, 85
 Set honour in one eye and death i' th' other,
 And I will look on both indifferently:
 For let the gods so speed me as I love
 The name of honour more than I fear death.

CASSIUS

I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus, 90
 As well as I do know your outward favour.
 Well, honour is the subject of my story.
 I cannot tell what you and other men
 Think of this life, but, for my single self,
 I had as lief not be as live to be 95
 In awe of such a thing as I myself.
 I was born free as Cæsar: so were you.
 We both have fed as well, and we can both

Macmillan thought had much plausibility. Hudson, Wright, and Miss Porter and Miss Clarke suggested that laughter meant object of laughter or laughing-stock. The word laughter occurs twice again in this play at iv iii 49, 114, and the second case has been thought to support laughter in the present passage; but there is a difference in the sense; and we may perhaps be persuaded by Kellner's instances (p. 61) of ght for gh that Rowe's change is justified. Leap in with me into this angry flood,
 And swim to yonder point? Upon the word,
 Accoutred as I was, I plungéd in 105
 And bade him follow: so indeed he did.
 The torrent roared, and we did buffet it
 With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
 And stemming it with hearts of controversy;
 But ere we could arrive the point proposed, 110
 Cæsar cried 'Help me, Cassius, or I sink!'
 I, as Æneas our great ancestor
 Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
 The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber
 Did I the tiréd Cæsar. And this man 115
 Is now become a god, and Cassius is
 A wretched creature, and must bend his body
 If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
 He had a fever when he was in Spain,
 And when the fit was on him, I did mark 120
 How he did shake. 'Tis true, this god did shake!
 His coward lips did from their colour fly,
 And that same eye whose bend doth awe the world
 Did lose his lustre. I did hear him groan.
 Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans 125
 Mark him and write his speeches in their books,
 Alas, it cried, 'Give me some drink, Titinius,'
 As a sick girl. Ye gods! it doth amaze me
 A man of such a feeble temper should
 So get the start of the majestic world 130
 And bear the palm alone.

Shout. Flourish.

BRUTUS

Another general shout!
 I do believe that these applauses are
 For some new honours that are heaped on Cæsar.

CASSIUS

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world 135
 Like a Colossus, and we petty men
 Walk under his huge legs and peep about
 To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
 Men at some time are masters of their fates:
 The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, 140

But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
 Brutus and Cæsar: what should be in that Cæsar?
 Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
 Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
 Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well; 145
 Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
 Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cæsar.
 Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
 Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
 That he is grown so great? Age, thou art shamed! 150
 Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
 When went there by an age, since the great flood,
 But it was famed with more than with one man?
 When could they say till now that talked of Rome
 That her wide walls encompassed but one man? 155
 Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
 When there is in it but one only man.
 O, you and I have heard our fathers say
 There was a Brutus once that would have brooked
 Th' eternal devil to keep his state in Rome 160
 As easily as a king.

BRUTUS I should not then ask Casca what had chanced.

CASCA Why, there was a crown offered him; and being offered 220 him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus: and then the people fell a-shouting.

BRUTUS What was the second noise for?

CASCA Why, for that too.

CASSIUS They shouted thrice. What was the last cry for? 225

CASCA Why, for that too.

BRUTUS Was the crown offered him thrice?

CASCA Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted. 230

CASSIUS Who offered him the crown?

CASCA Why, Antony.

BRUTUS Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

CASCA I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it. It was mere foolery: I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a 235 crown,—yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets. And, as I told you, he put it by once: but for all that, him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the 240 third time; he put it the third time by: and still as he refused it, the rabblement hooted and clapped their chopped hands and threw up their sweaty nightcaps and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swounded and fell down at it. And 245 for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air.

CASSIUS But, soft, I pray you. What, did Cæsar swound?

CASCA He fell down in the market-place and foamed at mouth and was speechless. 250

BRUTUS 'Tis very like. He hath the falling sickness.

CASSIUS

No, Cæsar hath it not: but you, and I,
And honest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

CASSIUS I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him 255 according as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

BRUTUS What said he when he came unto himself?

CASCA Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me 260 ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut. And I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said anything amiss, he desired their worships to think it was 265 his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried 'Alas, good soul!' and forgave him with all their hearts. But there's no heed to be taken of them: if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

CASCA

Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

CASSIUS

A very pleasing night to honest men.

CASCA

Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

CASSIUS

Those that have known the earth so full of faults. 45

For my part, I have walked about the streets,

Submitting me unto the perilous night,

And thus unbracéd, Casca, as you see,

Have bared my bosom to the thunder-stone;

And when the cross blue lightning seemed to open 50

The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it.

CASCA

But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble

When the most mighty gods by tokens send 55

Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

CASSIUS

You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want,

Or else you use not. You look pale and gaze

And put on fear and cast yourself in wonder, 60

To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause

Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,

Why birds and beasts from quality and kind,

Why old men, fools, and children calculate, 65

Why all these things change from their ordinance,

Their natures and preforméd faculties,

To monstrous quality, why, you shall find

That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,

To make them instruments of fear and warning 70

Unto some monstrous state.

42 Your . . . this!] Two lines in Ff, ending good. . . this? what night] Craik what a night 57-60 You . . . wonder,] Rowe's arrangement, generally adopted. Craik, Delius, Craig, Chambers, Lobban, Mason, Houghton, NCE, Macmillan men, fools, Kittredge finds an antithesis in his reading: old men, naturally wise, act and talk like fools, and children, naturally foolish, show prophetic wisdom. 71-73 Unto . . . night] As in Ff. Two lines, ending Casca, . . . night; in Hanmer, Craik.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man
 Most like this dreadful night
 That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
 As doth the lion in the Capitol,— 75
 A man no mightier than thyself or me
 In personal action, yet prodigious grown
 And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

CASCA

'Tis Cæsar that you mean: is it not, Cassius?

CASSIUS

Let it be who it is: for Romans now 80
 Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors;
 But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
 And we are governed with our mothers' spirits:
 Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

CASCA

Indeed they say the senators to-morrow 85
 Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;
 And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
 In every place save here in Italy.

CASSIUS

I know where I will wear this dagger then:
 Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius. 90
 Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong:
 Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat.
 Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
 Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
 Can be retentive to the strength of spirit; 95
 But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
 Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
 If I know this, know all the world besides,
 That part of tyranny that I do bear
 I can shake off at pleasure.

Thunder still.

CASCA

So can I: 100

So every bondman in his own hand bears
 The power to cancel his captivity.

CASSIUS

And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then?
 Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf
 But that he sees the Romans are but sheep. 105

75 Capitol,—] Dash added by Delius. 79 'Tis . . . Cassius?] As in Rowe. Two lines in Ff, ending meane: . . . Cassius?

He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
 Those that with haste will make a mighty fire
 Begin it with weak straws. What trash is Rome,
 What rubbish and what offal, when it serves
 For the base matter to illuminate 110
 So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief,
 Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak this Before a willing bondman: then I know
 My answer must be made. But I am armed,
 And dangers are to me indifferent. 115

CASCA

You speak to Casca, and to such a man
 That is no fleering telltale. Hold, my hand.
 Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
 And I will set this foot of mine as far
 As who goes farthest.

CASSIUS

There's a bargain made. 120
 Now know you, Casca, I have moved already
 Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans
 To undergo with me an enterprise
 Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
 And I do know by this they stay for me 125
 In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
 There is no stir or walking in the streets,
 And the complexion of the element
 In favour's like the work we have in hand,
 Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible. 130

Enter Cinna.

CINNA

I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this !

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

CASSIUS

Am I not stayed for ? Tell me.

CINNA

Yes, you are.

O Cassius, if you could 140

But win the noble Brutus to our party—

CASSIUS

Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,

Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this

In at his window. Set this up with wax 145

Upon old Brutus' statue. All this done,

Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there ?

CINNA

All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie, 150

And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

CASSIUS

That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

Exit Cinna.

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day

See Brutus at his house. Three parts of him

Is ours already, and the man entire 155

Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

CASCA

O, he sits high in all the people's hearts;

And that which would appear offence in us

His countenance, like richest alchemy,

Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

ACT II

SCENE I. ROME. BRUTUS'S ORCHARD.

Enter Brutus.

BRUTUS

What, Lucius, ho!
 I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
 Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!
 I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
 When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say! What, Lucius!

Enter Lucius.

LUCIUS

Called you, my lord?

BRUTUS

Get me a taper in my study, Lucius.
 When it is lighted, come and call me here.

LUCIUS

I will, my lord.

Exit.

BRUTUS

It must be by his death: and, for my part, 10
 I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
 But for the general. He would be crowned:
 How that might change his nature, there's the question.
 It is the bright day that brings forth the adder;
 And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—that!— 15
 And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,
 That at his will he may do danger with.

Th' abuse of greatness is when it disjoins
 Remorse from power. And, to speak truth of Cæsar,
 I have not known when his affections swayed 20
 More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof
 That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
 Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
 But when he once attains the upmost round,
 He then unto the ladder turns his back, 25
 Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
 By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may:
 Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel
 Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
 Fashion it thus, that what he is, augmented, 30
 Would run to these and these extremities:
 And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,
 Which, hatched, would as his kind grow mischievous,
 And kill him in the shell.

Enter Lucius.

LUCIUS

The taper burneth in your closet, sir. 35
 Searching the window for a flint I found
 This paper thus sealed up, and I am sure
 It did not lie there when I went to bed.

Gives him the letter.

BRUTUS

Get you to bed again: it is not day.
 Is not to-morrow, boy, the Ides of March? 40

19 Remorse] The Elizabethan meaning of remorse must be kept in mind. Moulton, 187, explains as "human sympathy"; Schmidt as "compunction of conscience"; Onions as "pity, compassion." 23 climber-upward] Ff Climber upward Warburton added the hyphen. Rowe and a few early eds., and Craik and Chambers among the more modern, followed F. Delius thought upward related directly perhaps to turns Craik considered the point determined by Macbeth iv ii 24, "Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward . . ." —which is not altogether convincing. 40 Ides] Ff first The correction was by Warburton and Theobald, who have been generally followed, but Delius, Macmillan read first. Hunter, ii 150, ascribed the error to a transcriber, feeling sure Shakespeare well understood that the Ides was the fifteenth of the month from a passage in North's Plutarch. Clarendon, Delius and Macmillan thought Sh. had in mind a passage in North, which has no reference to the situation, at the beginning of ii i: "Cassius asked him [Brutus] if he were determined to be in the Senate-house, the first day of the month of March, . . ." (Brooke: Plutarch, i 122; Plutarch, p. 995). Wright had little doubt that Shakespeare wrote first (Clarendon, 121). See also Furness, 78.

LUCIUS

I know not, sir.

BRUTUS

Look in the calendar and bring me word.

LUCIUS

I will, sir.

Exit.

BRUTUS

The exhalations whizzing in the air

Give so much light that I may read by them.

45

Opens the letter and reads.

'Brutus, thou sleep'st. Awake and see thyself.

Shall Rome, &amp;c. Speak, strike, redress!

Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake.'

Such instigations have been often dropped

Where I have took them up.

50

'Shall Rome, &amp;c.' Thus must I piece it out:

Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What, Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome

The Tarquin drive when he was called a king.

'Speak, strike, redress.' Am I entreated

55

To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receivest

Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Enter Lucius.

LUCIUS

Sir, March is wasted fifteen days.

Knock within.

BRUTUS

'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody knocks.

60

Exit Lucius.

I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is

The Genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council, and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Who doth desire to see you. 70

BRUTUS

LUCIUS

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,

CASSIUS

I think we are too bold upon your rest.

Good morrow, Brutus. Do we trouble you?

BRUTUS

I have been up this hour, awake all night.

Know I these men that come along with you?

CASSIUS

Yes, every man of them; and no man here

90

But honours you; and everyone doth wish

You had but that opinion of yourself

Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

BRUTUS

He is welcome hither.

CASSIUS

This, Decius Brutus.

BRUTUS

He is welcome too.

95

CASSIUS

This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cimber.

BRUTUS

They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves

Betwixt your eyes and night?

CASSIUS

Shall I entreat a word?

100

They whisper.

DECIUS

Here lies the east. Doth not the day break here?

CASCA

No.

CINNA

O, pardon, sir, it doth, and yon grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

CASCA

You shall confess that you are both deceived.

105

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;

Which is a great way growing on the south,

Weighing the youthful season of the year.

Some two months hence up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire, and the high east

110

Stands as the Capitol, directly here.

BRUTUS

Give me your hands all over, one by one.

CASSIUS

And let us swear our resolution.

BRUTUS

No, not an oath. If not the face of men,
 The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,— 115
 If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
 And every man hence to his idle bed:
 So let high-sighted tyranny range on Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
 As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120
 To kindle cowards and to steel with valour
 The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen,
 What need we any spur but our own cause
 To prick us to redress? What other bond
 Than secret Romans that have spoke the word 125
 And will not palter? And what other oath
 Than honesty to honesty engaged
 That this shall be or we will fall for it?
 Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,
 Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls 130
 That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
 Such creatures as men doubt: but do not stain
 The even virtue of our enterprise,
 Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
 To think that or our cause or our performance 135
 Did need an oath; when every drop of blood
 That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
 Is guilty of a several bastardy

Delius translates the phrase as "If not that which our miens display" (unsere Mienen zeigen); and Kittredge explains as "the sad and anxious looks of our fellow-citizens." In support of Kittredge, cf. Ant. and Cleopatra II vi 53, 54: "I know not What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face;" The context seems to show that Brutus here refers to the obvious distress created by the troubles of the times. 115 abuse,—] Ff Abuse; Theobald's change. 118 high-sighted tyranny] Ff high-sighted-Tyranny Schmidt glosses high-sighted as supercilious, to which Onions adds arrogant 122 women, then,] F<sup>1</sup> *women. CASSIUS

But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with us.

CASCA

Let us not leave him out.

CINNA

No, by no means.

METELLUS

O, let us have him, for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion, 145
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds.
It shall be said his judgement ruled our hands;
Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

BRUTUS

O, name him not. Let us not break with him, 150
For he will never follow anything
That other men begin.

CASSIUS

Then leave him out.

CASCA

Indeed he is not fit.

DECIUS

Shall no man else be touched but only Cæsar?

CASSIUS

Decius, well urged. I think it is not meet 155
Mark Antony, so well beloved of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar. We shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and you know his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all: which to prevent, 160
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

BRUTUS

Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar. 165
Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar,
And in the spirit of men there is no blood.
O, that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas, 170
Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,

Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds.
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
175 Stir up their servants to an act of rage
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose necessary and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be called purgers, not murderers.
180 And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm
When Cæsar's head is off.

CASSIUS                                Yet I fear him,
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar—

BRUTUS
Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him.
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself take thought and die for Cæsar:
And that were much he should, for he is given
To sports, to wildness and much company.

TREBONIUS
There is no fear in him: let him not die;
For he will live and laugh at this hereafter.

Clock strikes.

BRUTUS
Peace! count the clock.

CASSIUS The clock hath stricken three.

TREBONIUS
'Tis time to part.

CASSIUS                But it is doubtful yet
Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day or no;
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams and ceremonies.
It may be these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustomed terror of this night
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

CASSIUS

Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

BRUTUS

By the eighth hour. Is that the uttermost?

CINNA

Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

METELLUS

Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard, 215
 Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey.
 I wonder none of you have thought of him.

BRUTUS

Now, good Metellus, go along by him.
 He loves me well, and I have given him reasons. 220
 Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

CASSIUS

The morning comes upon's. We'll leave you, Brutus.
 And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember
 What you have said and show yourselves true Romans.

BRUTUS

Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily:
 Let not our looks put on our purposes; 225
 But bear it as our Roman actors do,
 With untired spirits and formal constancy.
 And so, good morrow to you everyone.

Exeunt. Manet Brutus.

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep! It is no matter:
 Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber. 230
 Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
 Which busy care draws in the brains of men:
 Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

PORTIA

Brutus, my lord!

BRUTUS

Portia, what mean you ? Wherefore rise you now ?
 It is not for your health thus to commit 235
 Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

PORTIA

Nor for yours neither. Y' have ungently, Brutus, Stole from my bed. And yesternight at supper
 You suddenly arose and walked about,
 Musing and sighing, with your arms across; 240
 And when I asked you what the matter was,
 You stared upon me with ungentle looks.
 I urged you further: then you scratched your head,
 And too impatiently stamped with your foot.
 Yet I insisted, yet you answered not, 245
 But with an angry wafture of your hand
 Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
 Fearing to strengthen that impatience
 Which seemed too much enkindled, and, withal,
 Hoping it was but an effect of humour, 250
 Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
 It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
 And, could it work so much upon your shape
 As it hath much prevailed on your condition,
 I should not know you Brutus. Dear my lord, 255
 Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

BRUTUS

I am not well in health, and that is all.

PORTIA

Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,
 He would embrace the means to come by it.

BRUTUS

Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed. 260

PORTIA

Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
 To walk unbracéd and suck up the humours
 Of the dank morning ? What, is Brutus sick,
 And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
 To dare the vile contagion of the night, 265
 And tempt the rheumy and unpurgéd air

To add unto his sickness ? No, my Brutus !
 You have some sick offence within your mind,
 Which by the right and virtue of my place
 I ought to know of: and, upon my knees, 270
 I charm you, by my once-commended beauty,
 By all your vows of love and that great vow
 Which did incorporate and make us one,
 That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
 Why you are heavy, and what men to-night 275
 Have had resort to you; for here have been
 Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
 Even from darkness.

BRUTUS                      Kneel not, gentle Portia.

PORTIA

I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus,
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus, 280
Is it excepted I should know no secrets
That appertain to you ? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes ? Dwell I but in the suburbs 285
Of your good pleasure ? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

BRUTUS

You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. 290

PORTIA

If this were true, then should I know this secret.
 I grant I am a woman, but withal
 A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife.
 I grant I am a woman, but withal
 A woman well reputed, Cato's daughter. 295
 Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
 Being so fathered and so husbanded?
 Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.
 I have made strong proof of my constancy,
 Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
 Here in the thigh. Can I bear that with patience
 And not my husband's secrets?

LIGARIUS
 I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand

 Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

LIGARIUS

 I here discard my sickness! Soul of Rome!
 Brave son, derived from honourable loins!
 Thou, like an éxorcist, hast conjured up
 My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,

SCENE II. ROME. CÆSAR'S HOUSE.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Julius Cæsar in his nightgown.

CÆSAR

Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night.

Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,

'Help, ho! they murder Cæsar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

SERVANT

My lord?

CÆSAR

Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,

And bring me their opinions of success.

SERVANT

I will, my lord.

Exit.Enter Calpurnia.

CALPURNIA

What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

CÆSAR

Cæsar shall forth. The things that threatened me

Ne'er looked but on my back: when they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Besides the things that we have heard and seen, 15
 Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
 A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
 And graves have yawned, and yielded up their dead;
 Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
 In ranks and squadrons and right form of war, 20
 Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
 The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
 Horses did neigh and dying men did groan,
 And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
 O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use, 25
 And I do fear them.

CÆSAR                      What can be avoided
 Whose end is purposed by the mighty gods?
 Yet Cæsar shall go forth: for these predictions
 Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

CALPURNIA

 The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

CÆSAR
 Cowards die many times before their deaths;
 The valiant never taste of death but once.
 Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
 It seems to me most strange that men should fear; 35

 Will come when it will come.

If the first undated octavo edition of The Massacre be dated 1594, which Greg prefers, then we may assume that, as O'Connor supposes (O'Connor: RS, 75), the phrase was already known and popular; but if the octavo be dated as late as 1599, as Chambers suggests (Chambers: WS, i 401), a reporting actor could have borrowed the phrase from Julius Cæsar and have incorporated it, together with ll. 1246-47 in a reconstruction of The Massacre. The Massacre is thoroughly corrupt and bears unmistakable signs of reconstruction. 31 princes.] F<sup>1</sup>, <sup>2</sup> Princes Craik princes NCE princes, 33 taste of death] From Matthew xvi 28, etc.

They would not have you to stir forth to-day.
 Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
 They could not find a heart within the beast. 40

CÆSAR

The gods do this in shame of cowardice.
 Cæsar should be a beast without a heart
 If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
 No, Cæsar shall not. Danger knows full well
 That Cæsar is more dangerous than he. 45
 We are two lions littered in one day,
 And I the elder and more terrible:
 And Cæsar shall go forth.

CALPURNIA

Alas, my lord,
 Your wisdom is consumed in confidence.
 Do not go forth to-day. Call it my fear 50
 That keeps you in the house and not your own.
 We'll send Mark Antony to the Senate House,
 And he shall say you are not well to-day.
 Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

CÆSAR

Mark Antony shall say I am not well, 55
 And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

DECIUS

Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar.
 I come to fetch you to the Senate House.

CÆSAR

And you are come in very happy time, 60
 To bear my greeting to the senators
 And tell them that I will not come to-day.
 Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser:
 I will not come to-day. Tell them so, Decius.

CALPURNIA

Say he is sick.

CÆSAR

Shall Cæsar send a lie? 65
 Have I in conquest stretched mine arm so far,
 To be afraid to tell graybeards the truth?
 Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.

DECIUS

Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laughed at when I tell them so. 70

CÆSAR

The cause is in my will: I will not come.
That is enough to satisfy the Senate.
But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home. 75
She dreamt to-night she saw my statuë,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood, and many lusty Romans
Came smiling and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings and portents 80
And evils imminent, and on her knee
Hath begged that I will stay at home to-day.

DECIUS

This dream is all amiss interpreted:
It was a vision fair and fortunate.
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes, 85
In which so many smiling Romans bathed,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia's dream is signified. 90

CÆSAR

And this way have you well expounded it.

DECIUS

I have, when you have heard what I can say.
And know it now: the Senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not come, 95
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock Apt to be rendered, for someone to say
'Break up the Senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams.'
If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper 100

Most high, most mighty and most puissant Cæsar,
 Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
 An humble heart.

Kneeling.

CÆSAR I must prevent thee, Cimber. 35

These couchings and these lowly courtesies
 Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
 And turn pre-ordnance and first decree
 Into the law of children. Be not fond
 To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood 40
 That will be thawed from the true quality
 With that which melteth fools, I mean, sweet words,
 Low-crooked curtsies and base spaniel-fawning.

Jonson's reference to this passage in Discoveries (Jonson, viii 584), "De Shakespeare nostrat," is: "As when hee [Shakespeare] said in the person of Cæsar, one speaking to him; Cæsar, thou dost me wrong. Hee replied: Cæsar did never wrong, but with just cause. . . which were ridiculous." See also The Staple of Newes (Jonson, vi 280). Pope ascribed Jonson's version to the blunder of an actor heard by Jonson in the theatre. Craik, Halliwell, Ingleby, Hudson believed that Jonson reported the text as it originally was. Tyrwhitt, basing himself on Jonson, suggested the original lines were "Know Cæsar doth not wrong, but with just cause; Nor without cause will he be satisfied." Theobald Steevens thought Jonson misquoted. Collier and Cam emphasise that Jonson was probably relying on faulty memory. Jonson in Discoveries (Jonson, viii, p. 578, ll. 483-87 and ii 442-43) did complain of defective memory in his later years. Herford thought it probable that the original text was "Cæsar did never wrong but with just cause, Nor without cause will he be satisfied." He submits that Jonson was an exact man and not likely to have misquoted; and Dover Wilson thinks likewise. Kittredge thought it possible that Shakespeare changed the passage in deference

Will he be satisfied.

METELLUS

Is there no voice more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear
For the repealing of my banished brother? 50

BRUTUS

I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cæsar,
Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

CÆSAR

What, Brutus!

CASSIUS           Pardon, Cæsar. Cæsar, pardon. 55
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

CÆSAR

I could be well moved, if I were as you;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me:
But I am constant as the Northern Star,
Of whose true-fixed and resting quality 60
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumbered sparks:
They are all fire and every one doth shine;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place. 65
So in the world: 'tis furnished well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshaked of motion: and that I am he, 70
Let me a little show it, even in this,
That I was constant Cimber should be banished,
And constant do remain to keep him so.

Kittredge follows F and adds [—Casca first, Brutus last.] 77 Et tu, Brute!] Not in Plutarch. The words may have occurred in Richard Eedes' Latin play, Cæsar Interfectus, played at Oxford in 1582; and are quoted in The True Tragedie of Richard Duke of Yorke: Et tu Brute, wilt thou stab Cæsar too?, printed in 1595, and in Nicholson's Acolastus his Afterwitte. See Praetorius's facsimile of True Tragedy, p. 67; Cam, v 458; Furness, 143. The phrase also occurs in Every Man Out of His Humour, v vi 79 (Jonson, iii, p. 585), and is a 'play-scrap,' but the apparent reference in iii iv 33 of the same play to Julius Cæsar iii ii 100, 101, supports the view that the audience was to associate Jonson's humour with Shakespeare's use of the phrase in Julius Cæsar. See note to our iii ii 100, 101.

Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

BRUTUS

Grant that, and then is death a benefit.
So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridged 105
His time of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop,
And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords.
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place,
And waving our red weapons o'er our heads, 110
Let's all cry 'Peace, freedom and liberty!'

CASSIUS

Stoop then, and wash. How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;

125

And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:

Brutus is noble, wise, valiant and honest;

Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal and loving.

Say I love Brutus and I honour him;

Say I feared Cæsar, honoured him and loved him.

130

If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony

May safely come to him and be resolved

How Cæsar hath deserved to lie in death,

Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead

So well as Brutus living, but will follow

135

The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus

Thorough the hazards of this untrod state

With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

BRUTUS

Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman:

I never thought him worse.

140

Tell him, so please him come unto this place,

He shall be satisfied and, by my honour,

Depart untouched.

SERVANT

I'll fetch him presently.

Exit Servant.

BRUTUS

I know that we shall have him well to friend.

CASSIUS

I wish we may: but yet have I a mind

145

That fears him much, and my misgiving still

Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter Antony.

BRUTUS

But here comes Antony. Welcome, Mark Antony.

ANTONY

O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
 Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, 150
 Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.
 I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
 Who else must be let blood, who else is rank.
 If I myself, there is no hour so fit
 As Cæsar's death's hour, nor no instrument 155
 Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich
 With the most noble blood of all this world.
 I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
 Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
 Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years, 160
 I shall not find myself so apt to die.
 No place will please me so, no mean of death,
 As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
 The choice and master spirits of this age.

BRUTUS

O Antony, beg not your death of us. 165
 Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
 As, by our hands and this our present act,
 You see we do; yet see you but our hands
 And this the bleeding business they have done.
 Our hearts you see not: they are pitiful; 170
 And pity to the general wrong of Rome—
 As fire drives out fire, so pity pity—
 Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
 To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony.
 Our arms in strength of malice, and our hearts, 175
 Of brothers' temper, do receive you in

158 you] Theobald, Craig, Mason, Houghton ye 175, 176 Our . . . temper,|

 Pope read exempt from malice, for in strength of malice, Capell and others no strength of malice, Badham unstring their malice, Craik in strength of welcome, Cam and others follow F. Macmillan read hearts, and treated
Of brothers' temper as qualifying both arms and hearts Herford took in strength of malice to mean nerved with the hatred just displayed towards Cæsar, but innocuous to Antony. NCE explains the phrase as "(though) strong in enmity." For other views, see Furness, 152, 153. It may be that malice is a misreading: Singer proposed amitie for it. Taking the text as it is, the conspirators stand before Antony bearing the weapons with which they slew Cæsar, and Brutus declares that with these same arms, capable of malice, but now with leaden points, and with brotherly temper, they receive him in, etc. Persuaded by the strength of their Amity in Antony and Cleopatra ii vi 137
 (which he misquotes as Julius Cæsar), Churton Collins supported Singer's emendation (Collins, 320).

With all kind love, good thoughts and reverence.

CASSIUS

Your voice shall be as strong as any man's
In the disposing of new dignities.

BRUTUS

Only be patient till we have appeased 180
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

ANTONY

I doubt not of your wisdom.

Let each man render me his bloody hand. 185

First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;

Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;

Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Metellus;

Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Casca, yours;

Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius. 190

Gentlemen all,—alas, what shall I say?

My credit now stands on such slippery ground,

That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,

Either a coward or a flatterer.

That I did love thee, Cæsar, O, 'tis true. 195

If then thy spirit look upon us now,

Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death

To see thy Antony making his peace,

Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,

Most noble! in the presence of thy corse? 200

Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,

Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,

It would become me better than to close

In terms of friendship with thine enemies.

Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bayed, brave hart; 205

Here didst thou fall, and here thy hunters stand,

Signed in thy spoil and crimsoned in thy lethe.

O world, thou wast the forest to this hart;

And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.

How like a deer stricken by many princes 210

Dost thou here lie!

Mark Antony,—

ANTONY Pardon me, Caius Cassius.

The enemies of Cæsar shall say this:

Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

CASSIUS

I blame you not for praising Cæsar so; 215

But what compact mean you to have with us?

Will you be pricked in number of our friends.

Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

ANTONY

Therefore I took your hands, but was indeed
Swayed from the point by looking down on Cæsar. 220

Friends am I with you all and love you all,

Upon this hope that you shall give me reasons

Why and wherein Cæsar was dangerous.

BRUTUS

Or else were this a savage spectacle.

Our reasons are so full of good regard 225 in your wisdom, and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all freemen? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

ALL None, Brutus, none.

BRUTUS Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

FOURTH PLEBEIAN

'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here!

FIRST PLEBEIAN

This Cæsar was a tyrant.

THIRD PLEBEIAN Nay, that's certain. 65

We are blest that Rome is rid of him.

SECOND PLEBEIAN

Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

ANTONY

You gentle Romans,—

ALL Peace, ho! let us hear him.

ANTONY

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears:

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. 70

The evil that men do lives after them;
 The good is oft interréd with their bones:
 So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
 Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious.
 If it were so, it was a grievous fault, 75
 And grievously hath Cæsar answered it.
 Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,—
 For Brutus is an honourable man;
 So are they all, all honourable men,—
 Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral. 80
 He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
 But Brutus says he was ambitious;
 And Brutus is an honourable man.
 He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
 Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: 85
 Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?
 When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept:
 Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.
 Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
 And Brutus is an honourable man. 90
 You all did see that on the Lupercal
 I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
 Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition?
 Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
 And, sure, he is an honourable man. 95
 I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
 But here I am to speak what I do know.
 You all did love him once, not without cause.
 What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?
 O judgement! thou art fled to brutish beasts, 100
 And men have lost their reason. Bear with me:
 My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,
 And I must pause till it come back to me.

FIRST PLEBEIAN

Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

SECOND PLEBEIAN

If thou consider rightly of the matter, 105

91 on the Lupercal] The Lupercal was a cave below the western corner of the Palatine where sacrifices were offered at the festival of Lupercalia on 15 February. The festival to which Antony refers was that of 44 B.C. See OCD, 519. Clarendon, 168, remarks that Shakespeare speaks of the Lupercal as if it were a hill. Cæsar has had great wrong.

THIRD PLEBEIAN                      Has he, masters?

I fear there will a worse come in his place.

FOURTH PLEBEIAN

Marked ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

FIRST PLEBEIAN

If it be found so, some will dear abide it. 110

SECOND PLEBEIAN

Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

THIRD PLEBEIAN

There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

FOURTH PLEBEIAN

Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

ANTONY

But yesterday the word of Cæsar might
Have stood against the world: now lies he there, 115
And none so poor to do him reverence.

O masters, if I were disposed to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honourable men. 120

I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar:
I found it in his closet: 'tis his will. 125

Let but the commons hear this testament—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, 130
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
Unto their issue.

FOURTH PLEBEIAN

We'll hear the will! Read it, Mark Antony.

ALL

The will, the will! We will hear Cæsar's will. 135

ANTONY

Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it:
It is not meet you know how Cæsar loved you.

 For if you should, O, what would come of it!

If you have tears, prepare to shed them now. 165

You all do know this mantle. I remember

The first time ever Cæsar put it on:

'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,

That day he overcame the Nervii.

Look, in this place ran Cassius' dagger through. 170

See what a rent the envious Casca made.

Through this the well-belovéd Brutus stabbed;

And as he plucked his curséd steel away,

Mark how the blood of Cæsar followed it,

As rushing out of doors, to be resolved 175

If Brutus so unkindly knocked or no.

For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel.

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar loved him!

This was the most unkindest cut of all;

For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab, 180

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,

Quite vanquished him. Then burst his mighty heart;

And, in his mantle muffling up his face,

Even at the base of Pompey's statuë,

Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell. 185

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,

Whilst bloody treason flourished over us.

O, now you weep, and I perceive you feel

The dint of pity. These are gracious drops. 190

Kind souls, what weep you when you but behold

Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here!

Here is himself, marred, as you see, with traitors.

So you thought him,

And took his voice who should be pricked to die
In our black sentence and proscription.

ANTONY

Octavius, I have seen more days than you.
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers sland'rous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load and turn him off,

It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion governed by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so:
He must be taught, and trained, and bid go forth;
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, arts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and staled by other men,
Begin his fashion. Do not talk of him
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things: Brutus and Cassius

BRUTUS

Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
 Are much condemned to have an itching palm,
 To sell and mart your offices for gold
 To undeservers.

10

CASSIUS

I, an itching palm!
 You know that you are Brutus that speaks this,
 Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

BRUTUS

The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
 And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

15

CASSIUS

Chastisement!

BRUTUS

Remember March, the Ides of March remember.
 Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
 What villain touched his body, that did stab,
 And not for justice? What, shall one of us,
 That struck the foremost man of all this world
 But for supporting robbers, shall we now
 Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
 And sell the mighty space of our large honours
 For so much trash as may be grasped thus?

Portia's death was meant to replace the other, but both got printed. The discussion is given in Furness, 222-5, who comments that many of the attempts to explain the facts are excuses for what would be a deliberate lie unless Resch's explanation were accepted. MacCallum thought Brutus may have expressed ignorance to Messala to save himself the pain of explanation. It is also arguable that Brutus would not open his heart to Messala as he did to Cassius, and desires to learn how much Messala and others know, because general news of this kind would have a depressing effect upon those among the forces going to battle who might hear of it. But Resch may be right.

In Plutarch (Brooke: Plutarch, i 163; Plutarch, 1006), the spirit appeared to Brutus at Sardis and was "a wonderful strange and monstrous shape of a body coming towards him, and said never a word. So Brutus boldly asked what he was, a god or a man, and what cause brought him thither. The spirit answered him, 'I am thy evil spirit, Brutus: and thou shalt see me by the city of Philippi.' Brutus, being no otherwise afraid replied again unto it: 'Well, then I shall see thee again.' " Thus Shakespeare identified the apparition with Cæsar, as in Cæsar's Revenge.

SCENE I. THE PLAINS OF PHILIPPI.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their army.

OCTAVIUS

Now, Antony, our hopes are answer'd.

You said the enemy would not come down,

But keep the hills and upper regions:

It proves not so. Their battles are at hand.

They mean to warn us at Philippi here,

Answering before we do demand of them.

Wherefore they do it. They could be content
 To visit other places; and come down
 With fearful bravery, thinking by this face 10
 To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage:
 But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

MESSENGER      Prepare you, generals!
 The enemy comes on in gallant show:
 Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
 And something to be done immediately. 15

ANTONY
 Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
 Upon the left hand of the even field.

 Upon the right hand I. Keep thou the left.

ANTONY
 Why do you cross me in this exigent?

OCTAVIUS
 I do not cross you; but I will do so. March. 20

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titinius, Messala, and others.

BRUTUS
 They stand, and would have parley.

CASSIUS
 Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

OCTAVIUS
 Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

ANTONY
 No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge
 Make forth. The generals would have some words. 25

OCTAVIUS
 Stir not until the signal.

BRUTUS
 Words before blows. Is it so, countrymen?

OCTAVIUS
 Not that we love words better, as you do.

BRUTUS
 Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

16, 17 Octavius . . . field.] A somewhat similar incident between Cassius and Brutus is here transferred by Shakespeare to Octavius and Antony, in order to show Octavius's dominant character (See Brooke: Plutarch, i 171; Plutarch, 1008.) Wright remarks (Clarendon, 189) that Octavius really commanded the left wing. 20 Lucilius, . . . others.] Added by Capell and widely adopted. Mason omits.

ANTONY

In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words. 30
 Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
 Crying 'Long live! Hail, Cæsar!'

CASSIUS

Antony,

The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
 But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
 And leave them honeyless.

ANTONY

Not stingless too. 35

BRUTUS

O, yes, and soundless too;
 For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
 And very wisely threat before you sting.

ANTONY

Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers
 Hacked one another in the sides of Cæsar. 40
 You showed your teeth like apes, and fawned like hounds,
 And bowed like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet;
 Whilst damnéd Casca, like a cur, behind
 Struck Cæsar on the neck. O you flatterers!

CASSIUS

Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank yourself. 45
 This tongue had not offended so to-day,
 If Cassius might have ruled.

OCTAVIUS

Come, come, the cause! If arguing make us sweat,
 The proof of it will turn to redder drops. 50
 Look!

I draw a sword against conspirators:
 When think you that the sword goes up again?
 Never, till Cæsar's three and thirty wounds
 Be well avenged, or till another Cæsar
 Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors. 55

BRUTUS

Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,
 Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

OCTAVIUS

So I hope:

CASSIUS

A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,
Joined with a masker and a reveller!

ANTONY

Old Cassius still!

OCTAVIUS

Come, Antony, away!
Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field. 65
If not, when you have stomachs.

Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and army.

CASSIUS

Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!
The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Ho, Lucilius! Hark, a word with you.

LUCILIUS (standing forth) My lord?

Brutus and Lucilius converse apart.

CASSIUS

Messala!

MESSALA (standing forth) What says my General?

CASSIUS

Messala, 70

This is my birthday; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala.
Be thou my witness that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compelled to set
Upon one battle all our liberties. 75
You know that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion. Now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perched, 80
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands,
Who to Philippi here consorted us.

And in their steads do ravens, crows and kites

Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost. 85

MESSALA

Believe not so.

CASSIUS I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit and resolved 90
To meet all perils very constantly.

BRUTUS

Even so, Lucilius.

CASSIUS Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rests still uncertain, 95
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together.
What are you then determinéd to do?

BRUTUS

Even by the rule of that philosophy 100
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself,—I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience 105
To stay the providence of some high powers
That govern us below.

CASSIUS Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

BRUTUS

No, Cassius, no! Think not, thou noble Roman, 110
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome:
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the Ides of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take. 115

And then the end is known. Come, ho! Away!

I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Took it too eagerly. His soldiers fell to spoil,

The torch light was lift up as he had promised . . .  Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes:
 Our enemies have beat us to the pit.

Low alarums.

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves
 Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, 25
 Thou know'st that we two went to school together.
 Even for that our love of old, I prithee,
 Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.

VOLUMNIUS

That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

Alarum still.

CLITUS

Fly, fly, my lord! There is no tarrying here. 30

BRUTUS

Farewell to you; and you; and you, Volumnius.
 Strato, thou has been all this while asleep.
 Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen,
 My heart doth joy that yet in all my life
 I found no man but he was true to me. 35
 I shall have glory by this losing day,
 More than Octavius and Mark Antony
 By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
 So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue
 Hath almost ended his life's history. 40
 Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest
 That have but laboured to attain this hour.

Alarum. Cry within, 'Fly, fly, fly!'

CLITUS

Fly, my lord, fly.

BRUTUS

Hence! I will follow.

Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.

My master's man. Strato, where is thy master?

STRATO

Free from the bondage you are in, Messala.
 The conquerors can but make a fire of him; 55
 For Brutus only overcame himself,
 And no man else hath honour by his death

LUCILIUS

So Brutus should be found. I thank thee, Brutus,
 That thou hast proved Lucilius' saying true.

OCTAVIUS

All that served Brutus, I will entertain them. 60
 Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Do so, good Messala.

I held the sword, and he did run on it. 65

Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

HAMLET

Hamlet was first entered in the Stationers' Registers<sup>1</sup> on 26 July, 1602, in these terms: James Robertes. Entred for his Copie vnder the handes of master Pasfield and master waterson warden A booke called the Revenge of Hamlett Prince of Denmarke as yt was latelie Acted by the Lord Chamberleyne his servantes. vj<sup>d</sup>. In 1603 appeared Q<sup>1</sup> with title-page: The Tragical Historie of Hamlet Prince of Denmarke By William Shake-speare. As it hath beene diuerse times acted by his Highnesse ser-uants in the Cittie of London: as also in the two V-niuersities of Cambridge and Oxford, and else-where. [Device]. At London printed for N[icholas]. L[ing]. and Iohn Trundell. 1603.<sup>2</sup> Q<sup>1</sup> is a shortened and debased text of the play<sup>3</sup> and Roberts's entry is widely held to have been for blocking purposes which the issue of Q<sup>1</sup> rendered ineffectual. Q<sup>2</sup> was issued in 1604, apparently to replace the bad Q<sup>1</sup>, and has for title: The Tragical Historie of Hamlet, Prince of Denmarke. By William Shakespeare. Newly imprinted and enlarged to almost as much againe as it was, according to the true and perfect Coppie. [Device]. AT LONDON, Printed by I. R[oberts]. for N. L. and are to be sold at his shoppe vnder Saint Dunstons Church in Fleetstreet. 1604.<sup>4</sup> Some title-pages are dated 1605. Neither Q gives Act and Scene indications. On 19 November, 1607, Linge made over his rights, which he had acquired from Roberts, to John Smythick (Smethwick), and the latter issued Q<sup>3</sup> in 1611 and later an undated Quarto (Q<sup>4</sup>), each Q (from Q<sup>2</sup> on) being set up from its predecessor. In the Folio of 1623 Hamlet follows Macbeth and precedes King Lear. The divisions marked in it are: Actus Primus. Scæna Prima. (our i i); Scena Secunda. (i ii); Scena Tertia. (i iii); Actus Secundus. (ii i); Scena Secunda. (ii ii); and no other divisions are marked. Q<sup>1</sup> contains 2,154 lines; Q<sup>2</sup> is more than 1,550 lines longer. Q<sup>2</sup> and F are much more closely related than either is to Q<sup>1</sup>; but Q<sup>2</sup> has 218 lines which are not in F, and F has 86 lines which are not in Q<sup>2</sup>. Two copies only of Q<sup>1</sup> are known.<sup>5</sup> Of Q<sup>2</sup> six copies exist, three in Great Britain and three in the U.S.A.;<sup>1</sup> and Dover Wilson has tabulated the variant readings in the different copies.<sup>2</sup>

A fourth important text is that of Der Bestrafte Brudermord (Fratricide Punished) preserved in a copy, dated "Pretz, den 27 oktober, 1710, of an older MS. once belonging to Conrad Ekhof<sup>3</sup> of Gotha." Extracts were printed in the Theater-Kalender auf das Jahr 1779 of Gotha, and the full text was published by H. A. G. Reichard in his periodical Olla Podrida, Berlin, 1781, Part 2, pp. 18-68.<sup>4</sup> This short German play unquestionably represents a version of Hamlet taken to Germany early in the seventeenth century. Chambers suggests that Brudermord derives from a Tragædia von Hamlet einen printzen in Dennemark, a play in the repertory of John Greene's Company which played in Germany in the early sixteen hundreds.<sup>5</sup>

Following the fundamental work of Pollard on Folios and Quartos, much has been done by Sir Walter Greg, Professor Dover Wilson, Dr. Duthie<sup>6</sup> and Dr. Alice Walker to demonstrate the relation between the texts and to establish to a degree not previously approached the ipsissima verba of Shakespeare. There will always be difference of opinion on some questions, but, broadly, as the result of their labours, it is possible to feel some assurance that the value of each text in contributing to the re-establishment of the dramatist's full version of Hamlet has been determined with considerable probability. Briefly, Q<sup>3</sup> appears to have been printed (with many errors, perhaps due to haste in composing) from Shakespeare's MS., with the possible help, in a few cases where it may have been illegible, of Q<sup>1</sup>. Q<sup>1</sup> itself is a garbled and cut-down version of a Q<sup>2</sup> text prepared by 'memorial reconstruction' and represents a recension of the play used in provincial production; but it seems also to be indebted in a minor degree to the older Hamlet (Ur-Hamlet) used by Shakespeare in preparing his play.<sup>7</sup> Dr. Walker<sup>8</sup> concludes that the F text was printed from a copy of Q<sup>2</sup> collated with

These are: ii 30, Being the loy and halfe heart of your mother. (cf. our i ii 114); xiii 11, And he hath halfe the heart of all our Land. (cf. iv v 86 f); iii 15, Like to a cunning Sophister (cf. i iii 46 f); vi 121, And borne before an euerlasting Iudge, (cf. iii i 66); xi 37-38, your husband With a face like Vulcan. (cf. iii iv 63). the current Prompt Book. The more correct version of the speeches of Marcellus and Lucianus in Q<sup>1</sup> has led to the suggestion that the actor of those parts was responsible for Q<sup>1</sup>'s reconstruction, aided by a record of the part of Voltemand. Polonius in Q<sup>1</sup> is called Corambis and in Brudermord Corambus; but the German play is mostly indebted to a Q<sup>2</sup> version, yet has some affinities with Q<sup>1</sup> and the Ur-Hamlet.<sup>1</sup> The result of all these relationships is that the texts of Q<sup>1</sup> and F sometimes agree as against that in Q<sup>2</sup>; Q<sup>1</sup> and Q<sup>2</sup> sometimes agree against F; Q<sup>2</sup> and F sometimes agree against Q<sup>1</sup>; and Brudermord has occasional parallels with one version, or maybe two out of the three, which parallels Duthie has used to elucidate the problems of textual relationship. Various short passages are omitted in Q<sup>2</sup>, probably, in Dover Wilson's opinion, by error of the compositor; and other omissions mean the loss of individual letters, words, part lines and single lines.<sup>2</sup> Omissions in F are cuts for production purposes, or for the removal of passages likely to offend, or are accidental. In response to the Act of Abuses various minor changes have been made in F in order to avoid seeming profanity.<sup>3</sup> Clearly, the fundamental text is that of Q<sup>2</sup>, and F is next in importance. Much more of Q<sup>1</sup> has been admitted into edited texts in the past than would now be adopted;<sup>4</sup> and the editor's task nowadays is to establish a text based primarily on Q<sup>2</sup>, with assistance of F, and to admit readings from Q<sup>1</sup> only where they may be judged of superior authenticity.<sup>5</sup>

Soliloquies play an exceptional part in the development of the drama, not merely those of Hamlet, but also those of Claudius and Ophelia. The verse is rich in alexandrines, feminine endings, run-on lines and extra mid-line syllables. It has great variety and is matched to the personality and action of the speaker. It abounds in vigour, when required, flowing with all the power of easy mastery. It is alive with imagery and advances in well-shaped paragraphs as the speaker's thought proceeds from conception to conception: all of which marks the dramatist's maturity in poetic and dramatic craftsmanship. There is all the difference between Polonius's lines in 1 iii 55-81, mostly end-stopped but with marked caesura, suiting his sententious mood, and the freely flowing harmonies of Hamlet's soliloquies, or the intentionally formalised staccato movement of the end-stopped lines in the Mousetrap play where the verse is clinched with rhyme and mid-line pauses are comparatively few. The imagery, as Caroline Spurgeon has shown us, is adapted to the theme.<sup>1</sup> There is constant reference to disease, corruption and infection; the animals mentioned are mostly of the harmful kind: the porcupine, hawk, tiger, serpent, adder, waterfly, shark; and plant-life, in which Shakespeare normally took such delight, includes the canker of the rose, nettles and thorns, deadman's fingers, the grave's green turf, poisonous hebona, weeping willow, rue, wormwood, violets that spring from dead Ophelia, primroses that border the pathway to destruction and weeds that choke the garden of the world.

The first known record of a Hamlet play occurs in Nashe's Epistle to Green's Menaphon, 1589, where Nashe writes: "English Seneca . . . will afford you whole Hamlets, I should say handfults of Tragical speeches."<sup>2</sup> Henslow's Diary records a performance of Hamlet at Newington Butts on 9 June, 1594, and the receipts as viij.<sup>3</sup> In 1596 Lodge wrote in Wit's Miserie of "y<sup>e</sup> ghost which cried so miserably at y<sup>e</sup> Theator, like an oister wife, Hamlet, revenge."<sup>4</sup> These passages refer to the pre-Shakesperian Hamlet, and so, perhaps, does Dekker's phrase in Satiromastix (1601), iv i 150, "my name's Hamlet revenge."<sup>5</sup> We come to Shakespeare's play in Gabriel Harvey's manuscript note in Speght's Chaucer published in 1598: "The younger sort takes much delight in Shakespeare's Venus, & Adonis: but his Lucrece, & his tragedie of Hamlet, Prince of Denmarke haue it in them, to please the wiser sort."<sup>6</sup> This could have been written later than 1598, but gives a terminal date; and if we adopt 1601 for the date of Merry Wives, the quotation in its Q<sup>1</sup> from Hamlet enables us to suggest 1598-1601 as terminal dates for Shakespeare's work on that tragedy.<sup>7</sup> A tentative date of 1600-1 is probably acceptable and suits the versification and style alluded to above.

The Hamlet story took form amidst the legends of the early barbaric ages of Scandinavia; and the vestiges of its barbaric origin which subsist in its developed Elizabethan version contribute to the problems which beset the play itself. Some knowledge of the early forms of the legend is therefore desirable. Gilbert Murray has shown the essential similarity of the myths of Orestes and Hamlet; and the psychologists, particularly Dr. Ernest Jones, have explained Hamlet's mystery in terms of the Oedipus complex.<sup>1</sup> But, in fact, the theme of the usurper who kills his kingly brother and weds his widow and is slain by his son, and the device of the Letter of Death, are extremely common in legend and folklore; and Josef Schick in the successive volumes and papers of the Corpus Hamleticum<sup>2</sup> has printed in the original languages many analogues from the written traditions of widespread peoples. The Hamlet story proper first had literary record in the Latin Historia Danica<sup>3</sup> of Saxo Grammaticus, a Danish ecclesiastic of the late twelfth century; which account was translated into French, embellished with rhetoric and moralising, in the Histoires Tragiques of Belleforest. The French version was translated into English as The Hystorie of Hamblet which was published in London in 1608:<sup>4</sup> it has frequent mistranslations and copies the play in a few particulars.<sup>5</sup>

Belleforest is the source of the English play. In this version Horwendille (King Hamlet) and his brother Fengon (Claudius) were joint Governors of Jutland under King Rorique, whose daughter Geruthe (Gertrude) married the heroic Horwendille. Fengon seduced Geruthe, slew Horwendille at a banquet, married Geruthe (she claimed, under compulsion) and seized the sovereignty. Geruthe was thus guilty of adultery and incest (marriage with deceased husband's brother). Her son Amleth, a youth, determined to wreak vengeance when he reached manhood and to claim the crown. To protect himself against Fengon, he feigned madness, but although melancholy, he showed no sign of real insanity or hysteria; but indulged in clownish antics, adopted dirty and slovenly habits and made riddling statements veiling shrewd truths. A maiden who loved him (origin of Ophelia) was employed by Fengon to tempt him, and so discover his real condition and intentions, but revealed the plot to him; as also did his foster-brother (origin of Horatio). The maiden was not the daughter of Fengon's friend (origin of Polonius) who suggested Amleth's talk with Geruthe, and who hid under straw at the interview and was slain by Amleth. After cutting up the body, boiling it and throwing the pieces into a sewer for swine to eat, Amleth returned to Geruthe and upbraided her in outspoken denunciation of her lust. She repented and aided him. Fengon, afraid to slay Amleth because of Rorique and Geruthe, sent Amleth to the English King accompanied by two envoys (origin of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern) who bore a message carved on wood ordering the death of Amleth. This message Amleth found en route, erased the characters and engraved a direction that the envoys were to die and that Amleth should wed the King's daughter. In England Amleth, expert in magic, solved various mysteries, and was betrothed; and the envoys were killed. He returned to Denmark, interrupted the Court funeral celebrations which he had instructed Geruthe to hold for his supposed death, and slew the participants. He then entered Fengon's chamber, substituted his useless sword, nailed in its sheath, for Fengon's and killed him. In a lengthy eloquent oration to the Danes he justified his conduct and was made King of Denmark. He returned to England, first married the Princess and later married Hermetrude, Queen of Scotland; and after further adventures, departed with his two wives for Denmark, where, betrayed by Hermetrude, he was slain by the usurper Wiglere; and Hermetrude, like Geruthe before her, married her husband's slayer.

The main dramatic characters are thus prominent in the story or are adumbrated. Hamlet's antic disposition, his melancholy and eccentric, enigmatic and outrageous talk are already part of the character, as well as his utter ruthlessness, bravery, resourcefulness, restless activity and satirical wit. He is a youth at the tale's beginning and a man when he kills Fengon, which partly explains the element of delay and the discrepancy in his age noticeable in the play. The exchange of weapons in the duel with Laertes has also a precedent. In the play the inference is that Gertrude was ignorant of King Hamlet's murder (it is explicitly so stated in Q<sup>1</sup>); in the tale she must have known; and the tale confirms what is less explicit in the play, the pre-marital adultery of Claudius and Gertrude. In endowing Amleth with eloquence and some statesmanlike qualities after Fengon's death and in the moralising and discursive comments in the narrative, Belleforest adds to Saxo's history elements derived from his own more civilised time. All this was to go further in the play, but the coarser elements which begin in Saxo, though moderated, still persist and are obvious in the dramatic version. The really fundamental dramatic change, so far, lay in cutting out Amleth's marriages and adventures in England and beyond, and solving the problem of revenge in a final holocaust half-way through the original story.

But more than Belleforest inspired the shaping of Hamlet. The prose tale already contained, in varying degrees, most of the elements of Senecan drama which had, from the 'sixties to the 'eighties, exercised a potent influence on English tragedy: these were murder, adultery, incest, perverted ambition, usurpation, intrigue, inflated rhetoric, moralising, philosophical comment, irony and aphorism. The series of Senecan plays in England had begun with Gorboduc in 1562 and had culminated in Kyd's powerful Spanish Tragedy, 1585-7 (?).<sup>1</sup> Here, however, in Belleforest was a narrative with the greatest resemblance of all current narratives to the Senecan model. Apart from the enhancement of the various elements available in Belleforest, the principal addition to the play conferred by Senecan tragedy was the Ghost with his message of crime and horror and his supernatural command to revenge.<sup>2</sup> The same elements were again and again employed in the making of revenge plots in English drama; but the many resemblances between Kyd's play and Hamlet have led to a belief that Kyd was author of the pre-Shakespearian Hamlet.<sup>3</sup> Attempts have been made to distinguish the innovations and changes which Shakespeare made in the play. These are not easy to determine; but comparison of the Spanish Tragedy and Hamlet, for all their similarities, confirms the Shakespearian touch in all those scenes and passages which render Hamlet one of the greatest of all dramas. Only a great dramatist, with powers beyond Kyd's, could have correlated harmoniously the progressive discords and conflict between the diversified characters with the inner conflict which never ceases in Hamlet's soul until the final silence. The device of a Play-within-a-Play as an integral part of the plot must, however, be credited to Kyd. A mid-play interlude had occurred in Sir Thomas More and in other contemporary plays such as Love's Labour's Lost and the Dream; but the vogue of the true Play-within-a-Play arose from the use that Kyd made of it as an essential part of the plot in The Spanish Tragedy and Shakespeare's use of it in Hamlet: and similar constructional use was made of it in much later drama at home and abroad.<sup>4</sup>

The plot of Hamlet bears evidence of its evolution through successive ages. It had its origins when vendetta was a duty, when power was won and kept by treachery and the sword, when such a marriage as that of Claudius-Gertrude was incest, when messages were carved in runes on wood, when the chambers of princes were strewn with straw. It was shaped by Saxo suitably for his time, re-shaped and moralised by Belleforest, and developed with the ghostly lore known to the Elizabethan playwright, the outspoken talk then tolerated, and philosophical inquiry into the meaning of life and the destiny of man. The modern playgoer has to concede the bygone conditions which render the plot possible. Gertrude's second marriage can no longer evoke the distress and horror which Hamlet throughout the play evinces.<sup>1</sup> On occasion the source can help us. Hamlet has been condemned for heartlessly causing the deaths of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern: they were, claims Señor Salvador de Madariaga, innocent people.<sup>2</sup> Now there is a vast difference between the open carved wooden message of Belleforest and the Elizabethan sealed dispatches of the play. The envoys of the narrative must have known the import of their mission, and Belleforest accordingly writes of la meschanceté des courtisans qui le conduisoient à la boucherie;<sup>3</sup> all we have in the play, apart from their function as the King's spies, is Hamlet's assurance that "they did make love to this employment": and one must conclude that the envoys' guilt (meant to be understood) is insufficiently established in the drama. Another problem is Hamlet's reluctance to kill Claudius whilst he prays, in order to do so at a moment when his soul would go to hell. This Renaissance idea has provoked unfavourable comment.<sup>4</sup> William Richardson and his successors claimed it to be mere self-excuse and protective camouflage of Hamlet's dilatory instinct.<sup>5</sup> But similar instances of a murderer's dread intention could be given outside Shakespeare; so spoke Richard III (of course, a villain) when he killed Henry VI, "Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee there"; so spoke Iden when he killed Cade, "I might thrust thy soul to hell"; and so said Hamlet when he demanded the envoys' deaths, "Not shriving time allowed." (See also 3 Henry VI i iii 35 f.) Modern delicacy resembling Richardson's has led to the creation of a stage-direction enabling Hamlet to overhear the plot to test him by means of Ophelia in the Nunnery Scene.<sup>6</sup> Such a direction helps to palliate his behaviour to Polonius and Ophelia: but did the Elizabethan Hamlet require such palliation? (See footnote to II ii 166.)

Again and again one comes up against the problem of the imaginative additions made, in interpreting it, to the information supplied by the play itself. In writing of Hamlet a principle was well established by Kittredge: "Nothing that is omitted is of any significance. We are not at liberty, therefore, to enrich the plot with our own inventions."<sup>1</sup> And Waldo, in referring to Coleridge and Bradley, was driven to the independent corollary that conjectures, being only conjectures, cannot be of great importance in the play.<sup>2</sup> There is, however, another means of adding to the information which the play offers: and that is, having adopted one view of the character of Hamlet, or another, to adduce matter from the source which the dramatist does not appear to have used, and to interpret the play consequently in terms which the text itself does not warrant. Madariaga, for instance, emphasises Hamlet's sensuality, invokes Saxo and Belleforest, and describes Ophelia's mad scenes as the occasion for her disclosure of the secret immoral relations between her and Hamlet.<sup>3</sup> Yet there is, on the other hand, ample testimony in the play to Ophelia's purity (and her babblings, out of control in madness, fortify rather than destroy the idea of her purity when sane).

The vast critical history of Hamlet is strewn with Hamlets. Each of them is proper to the critical theory of the time. It is usual for each new expositor to examine the Hamlets of his predecessors and to determine their shortcomings before establishing his own. These Hamlets have an almost infinite range: they include such diverse types as the Borgian egotist of Madariaga, the Man of Genius of Türck and the sensitive intellectual of H. B. Irving, dear to humanity because of his common human weakness.<sup>4</sup> In Hamlet himself Shakespeare arrived at the most elaborate example of his method of creating character by the interplay of antagonistic thoughts and emotions in a man who is acting in concord or opposition amidst other diversified characters in changing circumstances. Never again did he achieve, and probably never again desired to achieve, such great complexity, a complexity from which the critic has so often isolated a part and used it as a formula to explain the whole. For Hamlet is at once idealist and realist, imaginative but practical, swifter to plan than to execute, clear in thought but enigmatical in statement, credulous but sceptical, disinterested but egotistical, energetic but irresolute, generous but jealous, courteous but satirical, pure in instinct but bawdy in utterance, noble in language but drablike in curses, generously chivalrous but vindictively unforgiving, responsive and kindly but brutally callous. The catalogue, based exclusively on the play, could be very greatly extended; and yet the diversified qualities of Hamlet's character are integrated in his complete dramatic personality. Such are the mysterious attributes of humankind that this highly sensitive and richly gifted man, possessed of powers both for good and for ill, could, if placed in the exceptional circumstances in which he finds himself, act as we are shown he does. The mystery of Hamlet lies in the unassessable powers of human nature and how they may assert themselves. But, above all, Hamlet the play is greater than Hamlet the man. It is a co-ordinated representation of life, wherein construction, characterisation, verse and language are blended to produce the systematic whole. The partial Hamlets of the critics are not enough; and the end of all Hamlet criticism must be: see and read the play.<sup>1</sup>

Further on the songs, see Naylor, 75, 76, with notation for Ophelia's songs, 189-191, and for jig music, 197. Cowling, 35, 38, 44, 49, deals with sound effects accompanying the action. These suggestions had a measure of support from some older editors. Singer proposed for the missing line, etc., And as the earth, so portents fill'd the sky, Asters, with etc. Shakespeare's pronunciation is, however, always porténts. Furnivall in a private note favoured In Heav'n above appeared strange porténts, As stars etc. Cam, Herford, NCE in 116-120 follow Q<sup>2</sup> but insert dots for a missing line; Tolman concurred. Tschischwitz in 1869 and Gerald Massey in The Secret Drama of Shakespeare's Sonnets, 1872, Supplement, p. 46, placed ll. 121-125 between ll. 116 and 117; and Dover Wilson in CNS adopts this change. Tucker Brooke: ES, 119, 120, objects that this arrangement dislocates "stars with . . . blood" from the other omens of Cæsar's death to which they belong, and that it assumes that Shakespeare passed over his obvious cue for the Ghost's entrance in the majestic words about the "prologue to the omen coming on, . . . Unto our climates and countrymen." Tucker Brooke's view is that we have here (ll. 116, 117) an ordinary Elizabethan anacoluthon "not very harmful to poetry": and this seems an acceptable way of regarding the passage. See also Dover Wilson: MH, 222 f. Parrott-Craig consider Dover Wilson's change breaks the logical order of the speech and they prefer to think that a line is missing. 118 Disasters in the sun;] From Q<sup>2</sup>. For other proposals see Furness, 18-20. Disasters here has its etymological meaning, sinister aspect of a star; and the phrase signifies "bad omens in the sun." Greg: PE, 63, remarks that Burbage was getting portly, for Hamlet was fat (v ii 266), but that to begin a serious speech by emphasising it would have been disastrous: Shakespeare could not have written solid. In Arden edn., 1899, p. 21, Dowden wrote: "If we were to retain sallied, I should explain it as sullied . . . and . . . we have some reason to think that sullied may be right." Dover Wilson proposed the emendation sullied in TLS, 16 May, 1918, and adduces evidence in support of it in Dover Wilson: MH, 159, 198, 298, 307 f. Chambers (Warwick Shakespeare, 158) reads too too solid. He observes that the contrast here is with "dew" (l. 130) and that solid need not imply that Hamlet is fat, but he inclines to think that sallied is right in the sense of "vexed" and refers to ii i 39 where, however, he reads sullies. Stephen Schofield in The Listener, 15 Jan., 1948, maintains that thaw and dew need for antithesis solid and have no concern with sullied. Edith Sitwell alludes to Hamlet's "too-sullied flesh" (Sitwell, 91). Madariaga (p. 54) accepts sullied but attaches a special meaning to it, and derives it from souiller in a passage in Belleforest. A. A. Hill in Language (Baltimore) xxix, 560, argues that an Elizabethan sallied meaning 'sullied' existed. See also note in CNS, 294. 132 self-slaughter!] From Ff.  With an attent ear, till I may deliver,
 Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
 This marvel to you.

HAMLET For God's love, let me hear.

195

HORATIO

Two nights together had these gentlemen,
 Marcellus and Barnardo, on their watch,
 In the dead waste and middle of the night,
 Been thus encountered. A figure like your father,
 Arméd at point exactly, cap-a-pe, 200
 Appears before them, and with solemn march
 Goes slow and stately by them. Thrice he walked
 By their oppressed and fear-surpriséd eyes
 Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, distilled
 Almost to jelly with the act of fear, 205
 Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
 In dreadful secrecy impart they did;
 And I with them the third night kept the watch:

 (Warwick edn., 160) thinks it means to soften, to weaken. In modern parlance we would say "reduced, almost to jelly by the action of fear." Modern editors

Examples of courage used of a person are cited in NED from Hoby (1561) and W. Browne (1647)." Greg: PE, 63 (1928), thought that "Comrade" gave poor sense and was presumably a makeshift for an impossible word in the prompt-book. Dover Wilson had suggested that "courage" was a misreading of "coccayne" (cockney), but later, in 1934 (Dover Wilson: MH, 295, 296), he came to the view that courage was correct, meaning spark, brave, blood; and he quoted Hoby's phrase "the prowes of those divine courages" (CNS, 156). Kittredge in 1939 objected to courage on the ground that the quotation from Hoby did not confirm the reading, and that courage is an obvious misprint for comraque (fellow-rogue) as used in Hoby's Curry-combe for a Coxecombe, 1615, his poor Camragues of Doway. But Kittredge read comrade in Hamlet. Now comroque occurs in Jonson's Masque of Augures (Jonson, vii, p. 631, l. 56): "and the rest of your Comroques shall sit disguis'd in the stocks"; and it occurs elsewhere as recorded by Nares. Greg: PE, 55, 72, agrees about Or and would be content to agree that of a represents often if the use of the form ofn could be substantiated. Perhaps, however, we have in this long line remnants of a cancelled line beginning of a and Are, misread Or, was meant to replace of a. Similarly chief may be superfluous in the present text. The removal of these words brings us to the line adopted by Grant White and NCE. In π ii deale is disyllabic and we print F's devil. In Hand D, seemingly Shakespeare's, of Sir Thomas More (ed. Greg, Mal. Soc., p. 75), devil is twice spelt deule and is disyllabic. There seem therefore to be grounds for treating eale as a misreading of eule and as of two syllables, which gives a reading evil rather than Kittredge's e'il. Further on devil: evil, see Kökeritz, 188 f. E. H. W. Meyerstein in TLS, 10 Nov., 1943, finds support for ease in Catullus Lla, and thinks Catullus is paralleled in this passage. 37 often dout] Q<sup>a</sup> of a doubt In 1878 Bulloch printed a list of some 40 attempts to solve lines 36 and 37. Furness in 1877 devoted six closely packed pages to the same matter, and the Cambridge editors occupy six columns with it. Time has added more. Many of the guesses are without reasonable basis. As pointed out by Carter, 361, Sh. may have had in mind in writing these lines Ecclesiastes x i; but this seems to offer no textual help. What is wanted is an infinitive verb at the end of l. 37, such as oft corrupt, which is near Monck Mason's proposal (of't corrupt); but if this should satisfy the sense, of a doubt can hardly be derived from it. The nearest phrase to satisfy the sense and relate to Q<sup>a</sup>'s text is Steevens's reading often dout, doubt is a known spelling for dout: it occurs in F<sup>1</sup> in Hamlet iv vii 192 and Henry V iv ii 11. By a : n confusion of a may represent often; on which, however, see note to i iii 74. Dover Wilson: MH, 321 f., has made a case for often dout, though he follows Q<sup>a</sup> in his text; and Kittredge and NCE both adopt Steevens's emendation. Cam, Globe, Clarendon, Furness, Dowden, Craig, Chambers, Crawford, Herford, CNS, Alexander follow Q<sup>a</sup>. Delius off and out Kellner oft adants (=oft subdues). Campbell oft subdue, Kittredge, Parrott-Craig, NCE often dout For E. H. W. Meyerstein, see note to l. 36. Young: EP, 198, of it dout. Kökeritz, 297, supports Tucker Brooke's, adoption of Tannenbaum's oft adoulter which might have appeared in MS. as oft adoul't For sense of the passage, cf. Googe: Palingenius, 15 "noble vertue . . . they see With little spot of any vice, defiled hir to bee."

Doth all the noble substance often dout
To his own scandal.

HAMLET

What?

GHOST

I am thy father's spirit,
 Doomed for a certain term to walk the night, 10
 And for the day confined to fast in fires,
 Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
 Are burnt and purged away. But that I am forbid
 To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
 I could a tale unfold whose lightest word 15
 Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
 Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,
 Thy knotted and combined locks to part
 And each particular hair to stand an end
 Like quills upon the fretful porpentine. 20
 But this eternal blazon must not be
 To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O, list!
 If thou didst ever thy dear father love—

I find thee apt;

Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear:

A serpent stung me. So the whole ear of Denmark

Garrick, and Sir Henry Irving, as Hamlet, so spoke it and it is given to Hamlet in Forbes Robertson's acting edition of 1897. No doubt a short line to break up a long speech, as in Comedy of Errors and Tempest, would be dramatically useful. In Q<sup>1</sup> the speech is interrupted at this point, and the text runs:

[Ghost] . . . sent vnto my graue,
 With all my accompts and sinnes vpon my head
 O horrible, most horrible!
 Ham. O God!
 ghost. If thou hast nature in thee, beare it not, etc.

Cam and others adhere to Q<sup>2</sup> F. Amaranatha Jha ascribed to Hamlet, as does Kittredge, who remarks that the next line (81) is clearly the Ghost's reply to Hamlet's exclamation.

 But, howsoever thou pursues this act,
 Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive 85
 Against thy mother aught. Leave her to heaven,

CNS, after 'l. 166, Hamlet comes forward, his eyes on the book Parrott-Craig after l. 166 Enter Hamlet. Kittredge, NCE, Alexander after l. 166 Enter Hamlet reading on a book. The entry is important. Dover Wilson: WHH, 107, and CNS, lvi f., holds that Hamlet has an entry on the inner Elizabethan stage before his full entry at l. 166, and so accidentally overhears the plot to use Ophelia as decoy and to eavesdrop on him. Hamlet could thus know in iii i that the King and Polonius are behind the arras, which explains his outrageous language to Ophelia. The usual stage device differs. Irving, 21, 22, writes of Hamlet in iii i: "It is usual to represent his sudden and abrupt change of manner as due to an incautious movement of Polonius behind the arras, which reveals to Hamlet the fact that he is being watched, and that Ophelia has been sent to him as a decoy." In Ff the exit follows presently. in l. 169, I'll . . . presently. being a separate line and O, give . . . Hamlet? one line. As printed in Q<sup>3</sup> F the words O, give me leave. seem to be addressed to Hamlet, interrupting his reading; but they are perhaps more appropriate if addressed to the departing monarchs. Editors who place the words O, give me leave. after the exit, and so address them to Hamlet, are Cam, Globe, Clarendon, Furness, Craig, Chambers, Crawford, Herford, NCE. meanings to kissing. Knight explains that the carrion is good at returning the sun's kiss. Coleridge and Hudson maintain that the passage is intentionally obscure. In support of Warburton several quote Edward III ii i 438-9, The freshest summers day doth soonest taint The lothed carrion that it seemes to kisse: (Brooke: SA, 79); and Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? (I Henry IV ii iv 106). Some associate our passage with the preceding reference to honesty, which means virtue in the widest sense, and some with the following reference to Ophelia. Whether we read good or god the passage is associated with both; and is one among many in the play that profound tragedy lies in the natural corruption which ruins the good and the beautiful. The 'sacred radiance' of the sun engenders maggots; and such is humanity that generation is evil, even in Ophelia. Against this revulsion may be set very different conceptions in other plays. In PMLA, June 1949, pp. 507-16, John E. Hankins discusses our passage as dependent upon ancient and medieval theories of spontaneous generation and the widespread fancy, expressed also in Faerie Queene iii vi 7-8, that the sun's rays could induce pregnancy in a woman. Hankins supports the reading god. Rowe, Pope, Theobald, Knight, Furness, Dowden, Craig, Crawford, Herford, NCE, CNS, Parrott-Craig, Alexander read good kissing. Warburton, Steevens, Cam, Globe, Clarendon, Delius, Chambers, Kittredge god kissing. Malone, Mitford conj. god-kissing. GUILDENSTERN My honoured lord!
 ROSENCRANTZ My most dear lord!

- HAMLET In the secret parts of Fortune? O, most true:
she is a strumpet. What news? 230
- ROSENCRANTZ None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.
- HAMLET Then is doomsday near. But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular. What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends 235 you to prison hither?
- GUILDENSTERN Prison, my lord!
- HAMLET Denmark's a prison.
- ROSENCRANTZ Then is the world one.
- HAMLET A goodly one, in which there are many confines, 240
wards and dungeons, Denmark being one o' th' worst.
- ROSENCRANTZ We think not so, my lord.
- HAMLET Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so. To me it is a prison.
- ROSENCRANTZ Why, then your ambition makes it one: 'tis too 245 narrow for your mind.
- HAMLET O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.
- GUILDENSTERN Which dreams indeed are ambition; for the very 250 substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.
- HAMLET A dream itself is but a shadow.
- ROSENCRANTZ Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.
- HAMLET Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs 255 and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to th' court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.
- ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN We'll wait upon you.

Dover Wilson: MH, 96, 97, points out that the repeated 'but' indicates an omission in Q and not a late addition to F. Dover Wilson in CNS followed the punctuation of Q<sup>2</sup> except for two readings from F in dust? . . . not me, no, nor woman In Alexander: SP, it is argued that the passage in Q<sup>3</sup> contains phrases which have internal punctuation without external punctuation to separate them and that we should in modern practice convey the intended meaning by different marks. Thus, in forme and moouing, how expresse and admirable in action, how like an Angell in apprehension, how like a God: may be punctuated as in our text given above. For Dover Wilson's views, see Dover Wilson: MH, 211 f. In the latter part NCE reads: How infinite in faculty, in . . . moving! How express and admirable in action! How like an angel in apprehension! How like a god! In TLS, 14 Sept. 1946, G. Wilson Knight adduces additional reasons why in his view Dover Wilson's reading of the passage cannot stand. 293 What a piece] From Ff. ROSENCRANTZ To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you. We coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer 305 you service.

HAMLET He that plays the king shall be welcome. His Majesty shall have tribute on me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall 310 make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' th' sere, and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. Heath in Furness, i 170, explains the passage in terms of the behaviour of the heron in the sport of hawking, making off in a southerly wind, and the ease in then distinguishing it from the hawk. Dowden noted, however, that hawk was and is the term for a plasterer's tool, so that the contrast may be primarily between that tool and the ordinary handsaw; but there can be no doubt that here as in other phrases Shakespeare intended multiple meanings. Dover Wilson in CNS, 180, sees more than those noted above and regards handsaw not so much as a corruption (or variant) of hernshaw as a quibble upon it. Armstrong, 38, shows by means of "associated imagery" that Shakespeare wrote handsaw. Enter Polonius.] See note to l. 312.

Parrott-Craig follow Q<sup>a</sup>. CNS light for the law of writ and the liberty . . . These Q 1676, Rowe, Pope and others read wit for writ and Walker supported it, thinking law of writ un-English. We take writ to mean "written authority" as in Julius Caesar III ii 217, to which passage see footnote. law of writ and liberty refers back to scene indivisible, or poem unlimited. scene indivisible signifies drama in which the unity of place is preserved; and poem unlimited means drama in which the unities are not observed. Having said so much about drama itself, Polonius refers to the actors. For drama governed by the rules established in written authority (such as Sidney's Apologie: see Gregory Smith, i 197), and also for that free of them, these actors are the best. This represents the general view of the passage. Collier (Furness, i 173) thought that the probable meaning was that the players were good at written productions or extemporal plays like the Commedia dell'Arte. Dover Wilson in CNS, 181, 182, takes "the law of writ" and "the liberty" as terms "defining the jurisdiction of the Sheriffs in and about the city of London, . . . quibblingly applied to types of drama," the former referring to those districts where the sheriff's writ ran and where no playhouses would be erected. FIRST PLAYER What speech, my good lord?

HAMLET I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million: 'twas caviary to the general. But it was—as I received it, and others, whose judgements in 415 such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affection; but called it an honest 420 method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in't I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas'

Dover Wilson: MH, i 145, shows that talk is due to a probable misreading. Pope and Hunter considered the passage an ironical exposure of bombast in drama, from which Warburton demurred, describing it as Shakespeare's fine demonstration of dramatic writing in the classical style. Ritson thought Hamlet's admiration for the lines genuine. Coleridge found no attempt at burlesque and considered the lines superb epic narrative. A few passages in Hamlet may have been prompted by Marlowe's lines in Dido (Boas: Marlowe, 57, 58). See footnotes to ll. 448-50. H. D. Gray in MLR, xv, 217 f., also held that we have here part of an old Shakespearian play rivalling Marlowe. Bradley, 413-19, expanded Warburton's view that the speech was serious non-ironic drama. Dover Wilson in CNS, 184, finds Hamlet's Pyrrhus lines better poetry than those in Dido. It seems to the present editor that the lines were tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see: 425

'The rugged Pyrrhus, like th' Hyrcanian beast,'—

'Tis not so: it begins with 'Pyrrhus.'

'The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couchéd in th' ominous horse, 430
Hath now this dread and black complexion smeared
With heraldy more dismal. Head to foot
Now is he total gules, horridly tricked
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,
Baked and impasted with the parching streets, 435
That lend a tyrannous and a damnéd light
To their lord's murder. Roasted in wrath and fire, probably written expressly for Hamlet in an intended style of bombast and exaggeratedly crude emotion characteristic of Marlovian and Senecan drama, to set off the very different qualities and style of Hamlet itself, and that the fiery and violent energy of the Pyrrhus incident is meant to contrast with the long-drawn and much more immediate tragedy of the Hamlet play. The Pyrrhus speech is on a revenge theme, and Hamlet selects it to prod himself; and is not prodded. Thomson: CL (1952), pp. 117, 231, finds the speech suggested by Aeneid II 469 f., but written in the style of Lucan. The Cowden Clarkes, Tschischwitz and Seeley thought the added lines were to be found in the course of iii ii 173-198. Furnivall, R. Simpson and Ingleby held that no special lines were inserted. Furness, i 251, remarks that Shakespeare wrote the whole of the Gonzago play, but maintained verisimilitude by pretending that it was an old play adapted to his purpose by the insertion of a few lines. John Bamborough (Listener, 14 July, 1949) actually wrote twenty-five lines which might suit, but found he had nowhere to place them. Madariaga, 90, is of opinion that the King rose before the inserted lines could be spoken. The exit in Q<sup>1</sup> to iii ii 252 helps to confirm Madariaga's view. R. Walker identifies as Hamlet's dozen lines of insertion iii ii 164-5, 169-70, 199-200, 237-242. (Walker, 73 f.) Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Now I am alone. 520

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!
 Is it not monstrous that this player here,
 But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
 Could force his soul so to his own conceit
 That from her working all his visage wanned, 525
 Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect,
 A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
 With forms to his conceit? And all for nothing!
 For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba 530
 That he should weep for her? What would he do
 Had he the motive and the cue for passion
 That I have? He would drown the stage with tears
 And cleave the general ear with horrid speech,
 Make mad the guilty and appal the free, 535
 Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed
 The very faculties of eyes and ears.

KING

And can you, by no drift of conference,
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

ROSENCRANTZ

He does confess he feels himself distracted, 5
But from what cause a will by no means speak.

GUILDENSTERN

Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

QUEEN 10 Did he receive you well?

ROSENCRANTZ

Most like a gentleman.

GUILDENSTERN

But with much forcing of his disposition.

ROSENCRANTZ

Niggard of question, but of our demands
Most free in his reply.

QUEEN 15 Did you assay him
To any pastime?

ROSENCRANTZ

Madam, it so fell out that certain players

 As made the things more rich. Their perfume lost,
 Take these again; for to the noble mind 100 honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness. This was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

OPHELIA Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so. 115

HAMLET Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue. But if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise. I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant. It out-herods Herod. Pray you, avoid it.

HAMLET Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor. Suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for anything so o'erdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now this overdone or come tardy off, though it makes the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that neither having th' accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably. 15 20 25 30

Behind the arras I'll convey myself,

Exit Polonius.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven:
 It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
 A brother's murder. Pray can I not,
 Though inclination be as sharp as will.
 My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent, 40
 And like a man to double business bound,
 I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
 And both neglect. What if this cursèd hand
 Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,
 Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens 45
 To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy
 But to confront the visage of offence?
 And what's in prayer but this twofold force,
 To be forestall'd ere we come to fall,
 Or pardoned being down? Then I'll look up: 50
 My fault is past. But O, what form of prayer
 Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murder?'
 That cannot be, since I am still possessed
 Of those effects for which I did the murder,
 My crown, mine own ambition and my queen. 55
 May one be pardoned and retain th' offence?
 In the corrupted currents of this world
 Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
 And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
 Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above: 60
 There is no shuffling, there the action lies
 In this true nature, and we ourselves compelled

Dover Wilson points out that Ore was an easy misreading of And; but O'er makes good sense. The meaning is that Heaven's face glows (with fiery shame) over the solid earth, as on (or against) the day of doom. From l. 47 the poet has religion in mind; and the passage in question is an echo of 2 Peter iii 7: "But the heavens and the earth . . . are . . . reserved unto fire against the day of judgement." Editors have usually understood this solidity and compound mass to mean the earth. "Our globe," writes Kittredge, "is conceived as an harmonious compound of the four elements." Dover Wilson: MH, 73, 166 f., 224, 319, 326, urges that Hamlet clearly refers to the moon, at which he points as he speaks. There are reasons against this, though the moon may have appeared in painting in the roof over the stage (see Hodges, 69 f.): the reference in 2 Peter which alludes to heaven and earth and the Doom; the inappropriateness of solidity and compound mass applied to the inconstant moon; and perhaps the difficulty of making such a point in the Queen's closet. Also cf. Macbeth ii i 56, Thou sure and firm-set earth; Alexander added the dash after doom, and we have adopted it as clarifying the passage. 49 heated] From Q<sup>2</sup>. Ff and editors generally begin speech at l. 52. 52 Look . . . this,] Practice has differed in the matter of the two pictures. Steevens thought a station (l. 57) called for two full-length portraits and Malone, persuaded by an illustration in Rowe (1709), refers to two half-length portraits. The phrase his picture in little (ii ii 349) led also to the belief that miniatures were intended. In some productions Hamlet produced both miniatures (an unlikely provision); in others Hamlet compared a miniature with a wall-portrait; in others the Queen wore one miniature and Hamlet the other. Irving and Salvini left the portraits to be seen with the mind's eye only (Furness, i 290). Lionel Cust in Sh. Eng. ii, 11, thinks that the vivid descriptions demand two contiguous whole-length portraits on the walls; this was Brandes' view; and Dover Wilson in CNS has reverted to such a provision. Kittredge thought that station in l. 57 proved that full-length portraits were meant and refers like Dover Wilson to Der Bestrafte Brudermord where the portraits are dort in jener Gallerie. Granville-Barker (GB 3, 114) was not impressed by Rowe's pictures and writes: "I pronounce

 This was your husband. Look you now, what follows.
 Here is your husband, like a mildewed ear,
 Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
 Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed, 65
 And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
 You cannot call it love, for at your age
 The heyday in the blood is tame, it's humble,
 And waits upon the judgement; and what judgement
 Would step from this to this? Sense sure you have, 70
 Else could you not have motion; but sure that sense
 Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err,
 Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
 But it reserved some quantity of choice
 To serve in such a difference. What devil was't 75
 That thus hath cozened you at hoodman-blind?
 Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
 Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
 Or but a sickly part of one true sense
 Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush? 80

White pointed out, and Dover Wilson and Kittredge among others concur, that the antithesis is between monster and angel. The printer's misreading of eule (evle=evil) as dule (dyle=devil) was easy enough (see Dover Wilson: MH, 321). evil is an adjective qualifying habits (=evil habits), and a paraphrase is that Custom which ogre-like swallows up all sensibility to evil habits is nevertheless angelic in this that it lends fair and good actions becoming semblance. Even here there is a play on words, habit: frock or livery. Parrott-Craig paraphrase similarly. For past comments, see Furness, i 302, 303. The ape opens the basket on the housetop, lets the birds in it fly off, creeps in himself to emulate them, leaps, falls to the ground and breaks his neck. The Queen is thus warned that if her relations with Claudius lead her to reveal the truth about Hamlet (let the birds out of the cage) she will secure her own ruin. basket = wicker cage. 195] Further to note to ll. 137, 138, it is at that point in Q<sup>1</sup>'s abbreviated and greatly changed version that a difference from Q<sup>3</sup> F is manifest. Hamlet concludes a speech in saying:

*And mother, but assist mee in reuenge,
And in his death your infamy shall die.*

The Queen replies:

*Hamlet, I vow by that majesty,
That knowes our thoughts, and lookes into our hearts,
I will conceale, consent, and doe my best,
What stratagem soe're thou shalt devise.*

Theobald supplied a half line to follow done. in l. 40, which reads For, haply, Slander, putting Whose . . . shot; into brackets as parenthetical: we then read For, haply, Slander ( . . . ) may miss our name etc. Johnson followed Theobald who supported his addition with a reference to Cymbeline III iv 32-36. Capell added So, haply, slander followed by many, including Furness, Delius, Dowden, Craig, Chambers, Crawford, Kittredge, NCE, CNS, Alexander. Globe, Cam, Clarendon, Herford put dots after done to mark hiatus. Malone's So viperous slander,— and Staunton's Thus calumny, and other proposals, have not found acceptance. Parrott-Craig follows Q<sup>2</sup>. Of three possible explanations of the passage Dover Wilson's third (MH, 30) is that ll. 40-44 were perhaps marked for deletion in the MS. but were so marked that the compositor understood that only one half of l. 40 was involved, so that he set up the rest. On the other hand, the line And what's untimely done. O, come away! (ll. 40, 44) reads perfectly and the remainder looks like an addition resulting in a not uncommon anacoluthon. So interpreted the passage means that the whispered rumour of what's untimely done, usually as direct and deadly as the cannon shot, may miss our name, etc. SCENE II.] Added by Pope. Enter King and Laertes.

KING

Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,

KING O, for two special reasons,
Which may to you perhaps seem much unsinewed, 10
But yet to me th' are strong. The Queen his mother
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself—
My virtue or my plague, be it either which—
She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, 15
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone, 20
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timbered for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again
But not where I have aimed them.

LAERTES 25
And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desp'rate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age

KING

Not that I think you did not love your father, 110
 But that I know love is begun by time,
 And that I see, in passages of proof,
 Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
 There lives within the very flame of love
 A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it; 115
 And nothing is at a like goodness still,

 Dies in his own too much. That we would do

My sea-gown scarfed about me, in the dark
 Groped I to find out them; had my desire,
 Fingered their packet, and in fine withdrew 15
 To mine own room again; making so bold,
 My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
 Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,— Ah, royal knavery!—an exact command,
 Larded with many several sorts of reasons, 20
 Importing Denmark's health and England's too,
 With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,
 That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
 No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
 My head should be struck off.

HORATIO Is't possible? 25

HAMLET

Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.
 But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

HORATIO

I beseech you.

HAMLET

Being thus be-netted round with villainies,—
 Or I could make a prologue to my brains, 30
 They had begun the play,—I sat me down;
 Devised a new commission; wrote it fair.
 I once did hold it, as our statists do,
 A baseness to write fair, and laboured much
 How to forget that learning; but, sir, now 35
 It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know
 Th' effect of what I wrote?

HORATIO

Ay, good my lord.

HAMLET

An earnest conjuration from the King,
 As England was his faithful tributary,
 As love between them like the palm might flourish, 40
 As peace should still her wheaten garland wear
 And stand a comma 'tween their amities,
 And many suchlike 'As' es of great charge,
 That, on the view and knowing of these contents,
 Without debatement further, more or less, 45
 He should those bearers put to sudden death,
 Not shriving-time allowed.

HORATIO How was this sealed ?

HAMLET

Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.
 I had my father's signet in my purse,
 Which was the model of that Danish seal; 50
 Folded the writ up in the form of th' other;
 Subscribed it; gave't th' impression; placed it safely

So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

HAMLET

Why, man, they did make love to this employment.

They are not near my conscience: their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow.

'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes

Between the pass and fell incenséd points

Of mighty opposites.

60

HORATIO

Why, what a king is this!

HAMLET

Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon—

He that hath killed my king, and whored my mother;

Popped in between th' election and my hopes;

Thrown out his angle for my proper life,

And with such coz'nage—is't not perfect conscience,

To quit him with this arm? And is't not to be damned,

To let this canker of our nature come

In further evil?

It must be shortly known to him from England

What is the issue of the business there.

HAMLET

It will be short: the interim is mine;

And a man's life's no more than to say 'One.'

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself;

He treats feelingly as a mis-correction of feelingly, itself a mis-correction of sellingly, although, as he says, Twelfth Night ii iii 139 gives support for feelingly in feelingly personated. Osric speaks affectedly and is rebuked for it in the same style; but speak sellingly is a difficult point to make in the theatre; and more important than the above quotations is Measure for Measure i ii 33, where we have Do I speak feelingly now? 108 part] From Q<sup>3</sup>. For profane he conjectures profound, Shakespeare having written profond which the compositor misread and printed as prophane. Wilson dismisses F's fond as a form remote from the word that Shakespeare wrote; but in fact it helps to confirm his emendation. Shakespeare sometimes used the p with a crossed curl for pro: see proceed, etc., so written in Sir Thomas More, fol. 9a (and text in Greg's Malone Society edn., p. 77, ll. 237, 240, 251, 266). Was't Hamlet wronged Laertes? Never Hamlet.

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. 215

Who does it then? His madness. If't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wronged;

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

Dover Wilson shrewdly remarks that if the performing actor was fat, Sh. would hardly call attention to the fact (CNS, 255), and he holds that fat simply means 'sweaty.' He quotes in support 2 Henry IV ii iv 1. This is preferable to Craig's explanation (Dowden: H, 237) that fat . . . breath. means not reduced to athletic condition by fencer's training, because Hamlet was in training (v ii 190 f.); and is greatly preferable to emendations of faint and hot for fat (Furness, i 446). Sisson in Sh. Companion, 37, thinks fat . . . breath means 'out of condition.' Powell thinks that the simple explanation is that the strenuous bout had made Hamlet puffed and out of breath.

LAERTES

It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain:
 No med'cine in the world can do thee good,
 In thee there is not half an hour's life.
 The treacherous instrument is in thy hand, 295
 Unbated and envenomed. The foul practice
 Hath turned itself on me. Lo, here I lie,
 Never to rise again. Thy mother's poisoned.
 I can no more. The King, the King's to blame.

HAMLET

 Then, venom, to thy work.

O, yet defend me, friends. I am but hurt.

Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.
 I am dead, Horatio. Wretched Queen, adieu!
 You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
 That are but mutes or audience to this act,
 Had I but time—as this fell sergeant, Death, 315

 To the unsatisfied.

 O God, Horatio, what a wounded name,
 Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!
 If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart, 325
 Absent thee from felicity a while,

 To tell my story.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

AN entry was made in the Stationers' Registers under date of 7 February, 1603, as follows: master Robertes Entred for his copie in full Court holden this day to print when he hath gotten sufficient aucthority for yt, The booke of Troilus and Cresseda as yt is acted by my lord Chamberlens Men vj<sup>d</sup>.<sup>1</sup> Robertes's entry was apparently a blocking entry designed to prevent unauthorised publication,<sup>2</sup> and there was no issue in respect of it. A second entry to Richard Bonion and Henry Walleys was made on 28 January, 1609: Entred for their Copy vnder thandes of Master Segar deputye to Sir George Bucke and master warden Lownes a booke called the history of Troylus and Cressida vj<sup>d</sup>.<sup>3</sup> There were two issues of the corresponding Quarto in 1609, the first with title-page: The Historie of Troylus and Cressida. As it was acted by the Kings Maiesties seruants at the Globe. Written by William Shakespeare. [Ornament] LONDON Imprinted by G. Eld for R Bonian and H. Walley, and are to be sold at the spred Eagle in Paules Church-yard, ouer against the great North doore. 1609.<sup>4</sup> The second issue had for title-page: The Famous Historie of Troylus and Cresseid. Excellently expressing the beginning of their loues, with the conceited wooing of Pandarus Prince of Licia. Written by William Shakespeare. [Ornament] LONDON Imprinted [the rest as in Issue One]. In Issue Two an Epistle from "A neuer writer, to an euer reader." precedes the play; and the original first leaf had been removed and replaced by two leaves carrying the new title and Epistle.<sup>5</sup> The alteration in the title-page is connected with this change.<sup>6</sup> The Epistle is important biographically and critically and is printed as Appendix to the play in the present edition.<sup>7</sup>

There has been much difference of view on the significance of these facts. Swinburne, Creizenach, Rhodes, Lee, Fripp and others held Q to be piratical.<sup>8</sup> Willoughby and Harrison concluded that the players

P. Stokes, 1886. <sup>5</sup>On the details of the change see Alexander: TC, 268. Creizenach (?), 89, and Fripp, ii 716, consider Issue One to be Issue Two. Halliwell-Phillipps, i 210, and Fleay: CH, 62, 160, 220, also wrongly reverse the order. <sup>6</sup>To compensate for the attraction of the reference to the King's Men and the Globe in Issue One, Issue Two has a more alluring title-page. <sup>7</sup>The indications Issue One and Issue Two are preserved here for convenience; but Philip Williams has produced bibliographical evidence showing that the second title-page and Epistle were printed whilst the book was still at press (Studies in Bibliography, Univ. of Virginia, 1949, ii 25-33. See also Greg: EP, 2nd edn., p.h.). <sup>8</sup>Swinburne: Sh, 41; Creizenach, 89; Rhodes: FF, 32; Lee, 369; Fripp, ii 716.

had not been agreeable to publication.<sup>1</sup> Such views have been largely founded on the reference to the "grand possessors" in the Epistle: but it is far from clear who these were. The obvious and likely guess is that they were the King's Company. Tucker Brooke and Adams supposed that they might be the poet's friends who had transcripts of the play.<sup>2</sup> Knight, following an idea of Tieck's, thought someone at Court intended, possibly the Monarch!<sup>3</sup> It has also been tentatively urged that Shakespeare himself promoted publication.<sup>4</sup> These are matters at present beyond definite decision. Similarly with the statement in the Registers of 1603 and in Issue One that the Chamberlain's or King's Company had acted the play, a statement suppressed in Issue Two and complicated by the information in the Epistle of 1609 that the "new play" had never been staled with the Stage or clapper-clawed with the palms of the vulgar: we have no ready means of reconciling these apparent contradictions. Fleay, Luce and others accept the statement in the Registers of 1603.<sup>5</sup> Some interpret the Epistle to mean that the play was never produced. Malone suggested production at Court, and Rhodes both at Court and Blackfriars.<sup>6</sup> Chambers wonders if the play was not produced, like The Return from Parnassus, at Cambridge: to which O'Connor mindfully adds Oxford.<sup>7</sup> The play's subject-matter and legal phraseology support Alexander's suggestion that it was written for the Inns of Court; and Hotson believes it was presented by the Middle Templars.<sup>8</sup> Lawrence is more elaborate: he concludes that the play was produced by the King's Men and was a failure; which led to the withdrawal of the title-page in Issue One and to the new title and Epistle in Issue Two.<sup>9</sup> The mention of the Chamberlain's Men in 1603 would indicate that Shakespeare's play is not connected with the lost Troilus and Cressida of Chettle and Dekker (1599), written for the Admiral's Company and to which the fragmentary 'plot' preserved in the British Museum is thought to apply.<sup>10</sup>

The Cambridge editors were of opinion that Q was printed from a transcript of the author's MS.<sup>11</sup> There is reason to modify this view.<sup>12</sup> Although printing-houses tended to regulate spelling, the author's spelling survived in places in printed texts. In volume one of The Manuscript of Shakespeare's Hamlet, pp. 114-117, Professor Dover Wilson records the more unusual spellings in Q<sup>a</sup> of that play; and in

Shakespeare's Hand in Sir Thomas More (Appendix to Chapter IV) he examines such spellings together with corresponding forms in Hand D of the More MS. It is widely accepted that Q<sup>a</sup> of Hamlet was printed from Shakespeare's autograph; and the correspondence between certain of its spellings and those in Hand D is one of the converging lines of evidence which are persuasive that Hand D is Shakespeare's. Similar spellings occur in the Quarto of Troilus.<sup>1</sup> In concurring in this view, Professor Alexander also calls attention to the particular use in the Quarto of full-stop, colon and comma, such as Shakespeare is believed to have adopted.<sup>2</sup> There is thus reason to believe that the Quarto of Troilus was set up from Shakespeare's MS.

The Folio text also presents unusual problems. The play follows Henry VIII in that volume and precedes Coriolanus, thus coming between Histories and Tragedies.<sup>3</sup> Its second leaf is numbered 79 and 80, and it was intended to follow Romeo, the last page of which is numbered 79 (mistake for 77). Apart from the second leaf there are no page numbers in the F text. The history of the matter has been traced by Adams and Willoughby and Miss Alice Walker. It seems that Walley, the surviving copyright holder, refused permission to include Troilus in F. Jaggard filled the space allotted for the play with Timon. At the last moment Walley agreed. The type for one page already set up was scrapped; that for two pages was preserved and used; the rest of the text was set up and the play was inserted in the volume, but too late to include its title in the 'Catalogue' which precedes all the texts. Five extant copies of F include the cancelled page as well as the reset.<sup>4</sup>

The Cambridge editors judged that F was printed from the MS. used for Q, slightly altered by the author and afterwards by another hand.<sup>5</sup> Pollard held that F was printed from an independent MS.<sup>6</sup>

(Chambers: WS, i 441). <sup>1</sup>Spellings in Q similar to those in Q<sup>a</sup> of Hamlet or Hand D, or both, are: a=or, adiew, a leuen=eleven; bould, brabler, braunes, breth, call=cull, challeng, court=coact, distruction=distraction, durt, faced=forced, feauer, fitt, gate=gait, hott, lowd, minst, misties, obay, oule, pacience, pallat, plannets, push=pash, reveng, nott, rouz'd, seauen, sence, slipery, Thous=Thoas, waight, witnes, wrinckled. There are many others. <sup>2</sup>Alexander: TC, 281 f. See also Chambers: WS, i 441. <sup>3</sup>The Epistle in Q terms the play a comedy. Issue One has on the title "The Historie of Troylus and Cresseida." and (Issue Two) "The Famous Historie of Troylus and Cresseid."; both with running title "The history of Troylus and Cresseida." F<sup>1</sup> heads the play "The Tragedie of Troylus and Cressida.", with running title on the second and third pages (pp. 79, 80), "The Tragedie of Troylus and Cressida." and on the subsequent pages, all unnumbered, simply "Troylus and Cressida." <sup>4</sup>Adams: Journal of Eng. and Germanic Philology, vii 53-63; Willoughby: FF, 16, 47; Willoughby, 170, 171; Parrott, 204, Alice Walker in MLR, xlv, 1950, 459-64; McManaway in Sh. Survey I, 59, 77; and Survey 5, 145. <sup>5</sup>Cam, vi, p. x. <sup>6</sup>Pollard: FQ, 58.

Resemblances in orthography and the like led Chambers to conclude that F was printed from a copy of Q corrected by a MS.; and common errors and agreements in spelling and punctuation led Greg to a similar conclusion.<sup>1</sup> Alexander's theory was that Shakespeare made a transcript for the Q publication and inserted in it a few alterations in his own hand; and that F was printed from Q amended by readings taken from an earlier MS.<sup>2</sup> Our footnotes show that there are a large number of differences between the Q and F texts, mostly minor ones (including omission of single words), the bulk of which can safely be attributed to printer's errors and misreadings in both texts. Some omissions occur where difficult passages arise.<sup>3</sup> In places Q and F agree in unusual or incorrect readings.<sup>4</sup> Some readings in F differing from Q were clearly the result of deliberate change exceeding the usual accidents and practices of the printing-house, and must be ascribed to someone who had authority to deal with the text. Apart from changes arising from printing errors, the varied readings in F show no consistent improvement; there are very few changes of sense and little change of any major importance where comparable readings are concerned;<sup>5</sup> the tinkering with the F text as a whole conveys no suggestion of a creative hand at work. It seems clear that an amended Q was used in printing F; but one is forced to the conclusion that readings from F, where they do not remedy obvious corruption or omission in Q, or provide what seems to be intended and definite improvements, should be treated with reserve.

There have been theories of collaboration: even the most unlikely of contemporaries, Chapman, has been suspected of lending a hand.<sup>6</sup> Robertson calls the play a recast of others' work.<sup>7</sup> Masenfield's belief is that Shakespeare never finished the play, putting it aside for bigger subjects.<sup>8</sup> The Prologue (which is in F and not in Q) and last few scenes especially have been under suspicion as non-Shakespearian.<sup>9</sup> Dryden declared that the play declined as it proceeded; Swinburne described the ending as dramatically inexplicable; Luce found Act V chaotic; Harrison says the plot droops after v ii 131; but Mackail thought the concluding scenes effective if rapidly acted.<sup>10</sup> The suggesters of non-Shakespearian authorship of parts of plays often give too little consideration to the differentiation in style which Shakespeare constantly employs in accordance with character and situation. In this play the verse and language in the love scenes are purposely contrasted with the weightier dialogue of the princes, with its use of ponderous classical words.<sup>1</sup> A catalogue of high-sounding names—a Marlovian effect which Shakespeare was wont to use with discretion—occurs at v v 6 f. Pandarus's song at iii i 118 is a perfect example of a song designed for a definite dramatic purpose.<sup>2</sup> Van Doren calls attention to the large number of doublets which there are in the text, such as tortive and errant, bias and thwart, estimate and dignity and others.<sup>3</sup> Prose is used for the cynical and coarse passages,<sup>4</sup> and even for some of the lovers' talk; and the proportion of it, some thirty-four per cent., is high.<sup>5</sup> Pandarus twice addresses the audience direct, a practice much more frequent in earlier drama than in Shakespeare's.<sup>6</sup> Caroline Spurgeon shows that the imagery of Troilus, concerned frequently with food and disease, continues that of Hamlet, with which play, she thinks, Troilus is closely connected in imagery.<sup>7</sup>

Supposed evidence of date lies in a reference in Histrionastix (? 1599) to "Cressida, my cresset light," and the knight who "shakes his furious spear," which may refer to Henslowe's play, 'shake a spear' being a fairly common phrase.<sup>8</sup> Troilus was presumably written later than the publication of Chapman's Seven Books of the Iliad in 1598.<sup>9</sup> The reference to the fool on ice in iv iii 215, printed in Armin's Foole upon Foole in 1600, was probably a current story and offers no precise evidence of date.<sup>10</sup> Some have supposed that Troilus reflects the "war of the theatres," that Shakespeare's Ajax tilts at Jonson, or that the play is in fact the purge which, according to the third Parnassus play (1601-2?),<sup>11</sup> Shakespeare administered to Jonson.

Certainly the Prologue armed refers to the armed Prologue of Jonson's Poetaster (1601), who talks of "a well erected confidence":<sup>1</sup> but though, like Armin's Fool this may have been immediately apposite when Troilus was written, the Troilus Prologue was not printed until 1623. Dover Wilson thought that Shakespeare's play to some extent ridiculed Chapman's Homer (1598) and that it was the poet's "courtageous, almost savage, attempt to goad" into action the Earl of Essex who, in 1600, was moping and sulking.<sup>2</sup> Finally, a clear reference to the play seems to be made in Saint Marie Magdalens Conversion, 1603, sig. A3:<sup>3</sup>

Of Helens rape and Troyes beseiged Towne,
Of Troylus faith, and Cressids falsitie, together with references to Richard III and Lucrece.

There have been two schools of thought about the date of Troilus: those who take the sense of the above facts and the play's verse and language characteristics to mean a date for the whole play some time about 1602; and those seeing supposed evidence of revision or difference of treatment between the love scenes and war scenes, implying composition at two, or even three, periods. Fleay saw evidence of composition at three separate times; Stokes, Furnivall, Luce, Raleigh and others at two.<sup>4</sup> Dryden thought Troilus one of Shakespeare's earliest works, and W. C. Hazlitt and Saintsbury saw evidence of early work in it.<sup>5</sup> Loue labours Wonne, which Meres ascribed to Shakespeare in 1598, a play otherwise unknown, Hotson identifies with a hypothetical first version of Troilus, which would put a date for Troilus as far back as early 1598.<sup>6</sup> Dowden and Chambers see Troilus as all of one piece, and most commentators agree.<sup>7</sup> Dates range from the 1600-1601 of Dover Wilson to Brandl's 1609.<sup>8</sup> Drake was for 1601 and Ulrici 1601 with revision in 1608-9. Chambers, Adams, Parrott, Pearson, Halliday decide for 1602.<sup>9</sup> Robertson, Fripp and Bailey prefer 1602-3; Spencer late 1600 or before, Masefield 1603 or before; Boas 1603-4.<sup>10</sup> The metrical characteristics do not favour an early date, and there is much to be said for composition of the play as a whole in 1602. The unmistakable connexions between Hamlet, All's Well, Measure for Measure and Troilus mean that they are all of a period.

The origins and development of the Troilus story were shown in a study by Karl Young, published in 1908.<sup>1</sup> The story is entirely medieval, growing from de Excidio Troiae Historia of Dares the Phrygian (? sixth century), through the poem of Le Roman de Troie of the Trouvère Benoit de Ste Maure (c. 1165)<sup>2</sup> and its Latin prose version by Guido delle Colonne (1287), to Boccaccio's Filostrato (pr. 1472)<sup>3</sup> and Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde (c. 1382). Troilus and Cressida themselves first appear in Benoit; and Pandaro first appears as a young and helpful friend of Troilus in Boccaccio. Chaucer made Pandarus a sympathetic and helpful uncle. Shakespeare drew his material for the love-story from Chaucer, modifying the characters as Chaucer had drawn them, so that the theme lost the tenderness and regretful incredulity with which Chaucer regarded Cressida's defection, and Pandarus became servile and impotent, a meddler excited by others' passions. Chaucer for his poem drew not only on the Filostrato and Filocolo of Boccaccio, but also on Guido and the Romaunt of the Rose, and all this medieval lore was at Shakespeare's service. The historical part of the play dealing with the war was largely drawn from Caxton's Recuyell of the Historyes of Troye (c. 1475),<sup>4</sup> itself a translation from the French Recueil of Raoul le Fevre. Doubts have been expressed by Halliwell-Phillipps, Anders, Brandes and others, if Shakespeare used Lydgate's Troy Book; but Steevens noted that Shakespeare was indebted to it in the scene where Hector is struck down by Achilles' Myrmidons.<sup>5</sup> Johnson pointed out that, for Thersites, Shakespeare had drawn upon the Iliad;<sup>6</sup> and Chapman's translation was available for the purpose.<sup>7</sup> Therein Thersites is described as filthy, squint-eyed, lame, crook-backed, envious, splenetic, chiding, railing and impudent.

The critics have almost universally found the play perplexing and it has been described as enigmatical, difficult, disagreeable, odd, queer, baffling, ugly, chaotic, and even repulsive.<sup>8</sup> More extraordinary Bailey, 156; Spencer, 284; Masefield, 169; Boas, 370. <sup>1</sup>Published by the Chaucer Society. Lailavoix, London, Dent, 1928, 121 f. <sup>2</sup>Ed. by Léopold Constans, 6 tomes, SATF, Paris, Firmin, 1904. <sup>3</sup>In Filostrato, commemorating Boccaccio's love for Fiammetta, he drew on Benoit, Guido and his own Filocolo. His romance which Chaucer followed and amplified is of a very different kind from Shakespeare's version. On the various European versions of the medieval Troy story, see Edwardes. <sup>4</sup>Various edns. in 16th and 17th centuries. <sup>5</sup>Halliwell-Phillipps: Memoranda on Sh.'s Tragedy of Tr. and Cr., London, 1880, p. 6; Anders, 81; Brandes, 510; Steevens in Malone's edn., 1821, viii 437, quoted in Bethell, 103. See also Malone, 1816, xii 152. <sup>6</sup>Johnson, 185. Iliad reference is II 212 f. Thomson: CI, 211 f., feels Shakespeare must have read Chapman's Seaven Bookes of the Iliades. In some respects, especially the characters of Ulysses and Ajax, he finds revision of medieval views. <sup>7</sup>Stapfer, 223, discusses the relation of Chapman's Homer and Shakespeare's play. <sup>8</sup>Swinburne: Sh, 45; Swinburne: AS, 277; Tolman, 36; Smeaton, 362; Mackail, 84; Robertson: EL, 193; Bailey, 156; Reese, 489; etc.

is Stapfer's lone voice proclaiming that Troilus is the "playful recreation with which a great genius amused himself in his lighter moods."<sup>1</sup> Wilson Knight expresses a view that "Shakespeare is here intensely engaged with purely philosophical issues":<sup>2</sup> and some have ascribed to this a lack of dramatic quality in the play. How far Shakespeare was prompted to write by Chapman's Homer and how far the play was a counterblast to it are open questions. The idea that Troilus may rightly be called a "play of disillusionment," reflecting the author's "inexpressible pain," bitterness and loss of faith in man,<sup>3</sup> and the belief that Ulysses, or Thersites, is Shakespeare's mouthpiece,<sup>4</sup> are also questionable. These solutions are too simple for Shakespeare's complexity. Adams suggests that many critical difficulties vanish when we realise that Shakespeare handles the Troy story, not as Homer told it, but as medieval writers transformed it.<sup>5</sup>

Troilus is tragic without being technically a tragedy, and comic without being comedy. Ajax the vainglorious, Thersites the grotesque, and Pandarus the facetious are comedy figures; Act III Scene I between Paris and Helen and Pandarus is pure satirical comedy; the war and its foreknown consequences are surely tragic enough. The sources are sufficient to explain that the whole play is far removed from its ultimate classical origins. Homer had not yet acquired undisputed recognition as the supreme narrator of the tale of Troy. The theme of star-crossed lovers in the classical world, like Pyramus and Thisbe, Hero and Leander, Haemon and Antigone, inspired many medieval romances, such as Tristan and Isolt; and, like Romeo and Juliet, Troilus and Cressida is related to these rather than to Homeric myth. The 'heroes' of Troilus are in externals on the same model as Malory's knights. They ride and fight on horses instead of Homeric chariots; they attack with the sword rather than the javelin, and Achilles wields a scimitar; they may be clad in mail or riveted armour; they wear vantbraces and gauntlets, and their helmets have beavers for faceguards; they dwell in tents. The war is largely conducted, as in the romances, between mounted knights who meet in single combat, the rank and file being taken for granted.<sup>6</sup> Hector, through Æneas as Herald, issues a challenge to single combat in vindication of his lady's supreme beauty, just as Sir Pelleas does in the Mort Arthur for the beauty of Lady Ettarde (whom the false Gawaine won from him as Diomed won Cressida),<sup>7</sup> and as in real life the pseudo-chivalric Earl of Essex issued a challenge at Lisbon,<sup>8</sup> and a Spaniard and Lord Herbert of Cherbury issued challenges at Wezel in the Netherlands.<sup>1</sup> But the main, the fundamental difference between Homeric and Shakespearian Troy is that in the later history the gods have for ever departed. It is no longer a question of the heroes securing advantage by oblation and propitiatory sacrifice to deities who descend to take part in the battle. Now all is to be regulated by rational social and political and martial principles as enunciated by Ulysses and as would be understood by a Tudor statesman concerned with a vastly different society. The heroes and demi-gods have declined in status. The leaders who fight (apart from Troilus and Hector) are often brutish; the leaders who think are futile. Not all the theories and principles can help to shape the discordant Greek forces into a coherent army. The end, when it came, was to come, as Shakespeare's audience knew, not as the result of superior martial power, but by the deceptive treachery of the wooden horse. The heroes are flawed by excess of their worse qualities; even Hector, after appealing to established custom and moral principle, relinquishes his demand for peace at the dictates of 'honour' and prestige. Ulysses, well aware of the right and the noble, descends to Machiavellian duplicity. War which, in Hamlet was fought for a patch of ground not worth five ducats, is here fought for a whore and a cuckold.

The play ends as no other play in the canon, but the audience knew that not all Troilus's vigorous endeavours after his betrayal could save himself or Troy; that in fact the topless towers of Ilium were to crash in flames; that Cressida, according to the tradition recorded by Henryson in The Testament of Cressid (c. 1460), was to die an outcast and a leper.<sup>2</sup> It was no part of Shakespeare's plan to represent these culminating events; a comedy conclusion was impossible and none of the characters in the play was given the status necessary for tragedy. Shakespeare had often depicted war, with its heroisms, its vileness, and its inequitable results; he had in a long series of plays dealt with the relation of man and woman in romantic courtship and marriage; in this play all these matters are reviewed satirically. The play is a tissue of grand anachronisms, accommodating with ease all the lesser anachronisms, the medieval knights with their customs, the games of bowls, the references to states of grace, fee-farm, Winchester goose, painted cloth, Aristotle,<sup>3</sup> and the Bible;<sup>4</sup> and if there is any moral in it, it would seem to be that evil arises from the betrayal of loyalties.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

THE PROLOGUE

In Troy there lies the scene. From Isles of Greece
 The princes orgillous, their high blood chafed,
 Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
 Fraught with the ministers and instruments
 Of cruel war. Sixty and nine, that wore 5
 Their crownets regal, from th' Athenian bay
 Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made
 To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
 The ravished Helen, Menelaus' Queen,
 With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel. 10
 To Tenedos they come;
 And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
 Their warlike fraughtage. Now on Dardan plains
 The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
 Their brave pavilions. Priam's six-gated city, 15
 Dardan, and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
 And Antenorides, with massy staples,
 And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
 Sperr up the sons of Troy.
 Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits, 20
 On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
 Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come

ACT I

SCENE I. TROY. BEFORE PRIAM'S PALACE.

Enter Pandarus and Troilus.

TROILUS

Call here my varlet; I'll unarm again.
 Why should I war without the walls of Troy
 That find such cruel battle here within?
 Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
 Let him to field: Troilus, alas, hath none! 5

PANDARUS

Will this gear ne'er be mended?

The Greeks are strong and skilful to their strength,
 Fierce to their skill and to their fierceness valiant,
 But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
 Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance, 10
 Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
 And skillless as unpractised infancy.

PANDARUS Well, I have told you enough of this. For my part, I'll not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding. 15

PANDARUS Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking: nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

I was about to tell thee:—when my heart,

As wedg'd with a sigh, would rive in twain,

Lest Hector or my father should perceive me.

I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,

—well, go to—there were no more comparison between the 40 women. But, for my part, she is my kinswoman: I would not, as they term it, praise her. But I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

TROIILUS

O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,— 45
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drowned,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrenched. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love. Thou answer'st 'She is fair';
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart 50
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice,
Handlest in thy discourse. O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink
Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense 55
Hard as the palm of ploughman. This thou tell'st me,
As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it. 60

PANDARUS

I speak no more than truth.

TROIILUS

Thou dost not speak so much.

PANDARUS Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is. If she be fair, 'tis the better for her: and she be not, she has the mends in her own hands. 65

TROILUS What, art thou angry, Pandarus? What, with me? 70

PANDARUS Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen: and she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a black-a-moor: 'tis all one to me.

TROILUS Say I she is not fair? 75

PANDARUS I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father. Let her to the Greeks: and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' th' matter.

It is too starved a subject for my sword.

- ALEXANDER Up to the eastern tower,
 Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
 To see the battle. Hector, whose patience
 Is as a virtue fixed, to-day was moved. 5
 He chid Andromache and struck his armourer;
 And, like as there were husbandry in war,
 Before the sun rose he was harnessed light,
 And to the field goes he; where every flower
 Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw 10
 In Hector's wrath.
- CRESSIDA What was his cause of anger?
- ALEXANDER
 The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks
 A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector:
 They call him Ajax.
- CRESSIDA Good: and what of him?
- ALEXANDER
 They say he is a very man per se, 15
 And stands alone.
- CRESSIDA So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.
- ALEXANDER This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions. He is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the 20 bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion. There is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attainment but he carries 25 some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause and merry against the hair. He hath the joints of everything, but everything so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

 make Hector angry? 30

- CRESSIDA Who comes here?
ALEXANDER Madam, your uncle Pandarus. 35
CRESSIDA Hector's a gallant man.
ALEXANDER As may be in the world, lady.
PANDARUS What's that? What's that?
CRESSIDA Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.
PANDARUS Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of? 40 Good morrow, Alexander. How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?
CRESSIDA This morning, uncle.
PANDARUS What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed and gone ere you came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was 45 she?
CRESSIDA Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.
PANDARUS E'en so: Hector was stirring early.
CRESSIDA That were we talking of, and of his anger.
PANDARUS Was he angry? 50
CRESSIDA So he says here.
PANDARUS True, he was so: I know the cause too. He'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that. And there's Troilus will not come far behind him. Let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too. 55
CRESSIDA What, is he angry too?
PANDARUS Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.
CRESSIDA O Jupiter! there's no comparison.
PANDARUS What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him? 60
CRESSIDA Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him.
PANDARUS Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.
CRESSIDA Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.
PANDARUS No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.

CRESSIDA He shall not need it, if he have his own. 80

PANDARUS Nor his qualities.

CRESSIDA No matter.

PANDARUS Nor his beauty.

CRESSIDA 'Twould not become him: his own's better.

PANDARUS You have no judgement, niece. Helen herself swore 85 must confess,—not brown neither,—

CRESSIDA No, but brown.

PANDARUS Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

CRESSIDA To say the truth, true and not true. 90

PANDARUS She praised his complexion above Paris.

CRESSIDA Why, Paris hath colour enough.

PANDARUS So he has.

CRESSIDA Then Troilus should have too much. If she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his: he having colour 95 enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended
Troilus for a copper nose.

PANDARUS I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than
Paris. 100

CRESSIDA Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his 105 particulars therein to a total.

PANDARUS Why, he is very young: and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

CRESSIDA Is he so young a man and so old a lifter?

PANDARUS But, to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came 110 and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,—

CRESSIDA Juno have mercy! how came it cloven?

PANDARUS Why, you know, 'tis dimpled: I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

CRESSIDA O, he smiles valiantly. 115

PANDARUS Does he not?

CRESSIDA O yes, and 'twere a cloud in autumn.

PANDARUS Why, go to, then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,—

CRESSIDA Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so. 120

PANDARUS Troilus! why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

CRESSIDA If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' th' shell.

PANDARUS I cannot choose but laugh to think how she tickled 125 his chin; indeed, she has a marvell's white hand, I must needs confess,—

CRESSIDA Without the rack.

PANDARUS And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

CRESSIDA Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer. 130

Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day?
He's not hurt. Why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha!
Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon.

CRESSIDA Who's that? 200

Helenus passes.

PANDARUS That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus.

CRESSIDA Can Helenus fight, uncle?

PANDARUS Helenus! no. Yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry 205
'Troilus'? Helenus is a priest.

CRESSIDA What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Troilus passes.

PANDARUS Where? Yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus!
There's a man, niece! Hem! Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry! 210

CRESSIDA Peace, for shame, peace!

PANDARUS Mark him: note him. O brave Troilus! Look well upon him, niece. Look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hacked than Hector's; and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he never saw three-and-twenty. Go 215 thy way, Troilus, go thy way! Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable

*Sennet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Diomedes, Menelaus,

AGAMEMNON

Princes,
What grief hath set these jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below
Fails in the promised largeness. Checks and disasters 5
Grow in the veins of actions highest reared,
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infects the sound pine and diverts his grain
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us 10
That we come short of our suppose so far
That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim 15
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gave't surmiséd shape. Why then, you princes,
Do you with cheeks abashed behold our works,
And call them shames? which are indeed nought else
But the protractive trials of great Jove 20
To find persistive constancy in men.
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love; for then the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affined and kin. 25

But in the wind and tempest of her frown,
 Distinction with a broad and powerful fan,
 Puffing at all, winnows the light away,
 And what hath mass or matter, by itself

NESTOR

With due observance of thy godlike seat,
 Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
 Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
 Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth,
 How many shallow bauble boats dare sail 35
 Upon her patient breast, making their way
 With those of nobler bulk!

But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
 The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
 The strong-ribbed bark through liquid mountains cut, 40
 Bounding between the two moist elements,
 Like Perseus' horse. Where's then the saucy boat,
 Whose weak untimbered sides but even now
 Co-rivalled greatness? Either to harbour fled,
 Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so 45
 Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide
 In storms of fortune. For in her ray and brightness
 The herd hath more annoyance by the breese
 Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
 Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, 50
 And flies fled under shade, why then the thing of courage
 As roused with rage with rage doth sympathize,
 And with an accent tuned in selfsame key
 Retorts to chiding fortune.

Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
 But by degree, stand in authentic place?
 Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And, hark, what discord follows! Each thing meets 110
 In mere oppugnancy. The bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
 And make a sop of all this solid globe;
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead; 115
 Force should be right, or rather, right and wrong,
 Between whose endless jar justice resides,
 Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
 Then everything includes itself in power,
 Power into will, will into appetite; 120
 And appetite, an universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,
 Must make perforce an universal prey,
 And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
 This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125
 Follows the choking.
 And this neglection of degree it is
 That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
 It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
 By him one step below; he by the next; 130
 That next by him beneath: so every step,
 Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick
 Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
 Of pale and bloodless emulation.
 And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot, 135
 Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
 Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

ULYSSES

The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
 The sinew and the forehead of our host,
 Having his ear full of his airy fame,
 Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent 145
 Lies mocking our designs. With him, Patroclus,
 Upon a lazy bed, the livelong day
 Breaks scurril jests;
 And with ridiculous and awkward action,
 Which, slanderer, he imitation calls, 150
 He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
 Thy topless deputation he puts on;
 And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
 Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
 To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 155
 'Twixt his stretched footing and the scaffoldage,—
 Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
 He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a-mending, with terms unsquared,
 Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropped, 160
 Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff,
 The large Achilles, on his pressed bed lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause,
 Cries 'Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
 Now play me Nestor: hem, and stroke thy beard, 165
 As he being dressed to some oration.'
 That's done, as near as the extremest ends
 Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife.
 Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
 'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus, 170
 Arming to answer in a night alarm.'

Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,
 And, with a palsy fumbling on his gorget,
 Shake in and out the rivet. And at this sport 175
 Sir Valour dies, cries 'O, enough, Patroclus,
 Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
 In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,
 All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
 Several and generals of grace exact, 180
 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
 Excitements to the field or speech for truce,
 Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
 As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

NESTOR

And in the imitation of these twain, 185
 Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
 With an imperial voice, many are infect.
 Ajax is grown self-willed, and bears his head
 In such a rein, in full as proud a place
 As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him; 190
 Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war
 Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites,
 A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint,
 To match us in comparisons with dirt,
 To weaken and discredit our exposure, 195
 How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarmed, 235
As bending angels: that's their fame in peace.

But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas!
Peace, Trojan! Lay thy finger on thy lips! 240

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy 260
A prince called Hector—Priam is his father—
Who in this dull and long-continued truce
Is resty grown. He bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords!

That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,
That knows his valour and knows not his fear,
That loves his mistress more than in confession

And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks.
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it:
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer, 275
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms;
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call
Midway between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.
If any come, Hector shall honour him; 280
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sunburnt and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbulk us all.

NESTOR

Well, and how? 320

ULYSSES

This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

NESTOR

True. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up; 325
And, in the publication, make no strain
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya,—though, Apollo knows,
'Tis dry enough—will, with great speed of judgement,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose 330
Pointing on him.

That can from Hector bring those honours off,
 If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat, 335
 Yet in this trial much opinion dwells;
 For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
 With their fin'st palate. And trust to me, Ulysses,
 Our imputation shall be oddly poised
 In this vile action; for the success, 340
 Although particular, shall give a scantling
 Of good or bad unto the general;
 And in such indexes, although small pricks
 To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
 The baby figure of the giant mass 345
 Of things to come at large. It is supposed
 He that meets Hector issues from our choice;
 And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
 Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
 As 'twere from forth us all, a man distilled 350
 Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
 What heart receives from hence a conqu'ring part

NESTOR

I see them not with my old eyes. What are they?

ULYSSES

What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
 Were he not proud, we all should share with him.
 But he already is too insolent;
 And it were better parch in Afric sun 370
 Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
 Should he 'scape Hector fair. If he were foiled,
 Why then, we did our main opinion crush
 In taint of our best man. No, make a lott'ry;
 And by device let blockish Ajax draw 375
 The sort to fight with Hector. Among ourselves
 Give him allowance for the better man;
 For that will physic the great Myrmidon
 Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall
 His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends. 380
 If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
 We'll dress him up in voices. If he fail,
 Yet go we under our opinion still
 That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
 Our project's life this shape of sense assumes, 385
 Ajax employed plucks down Achilles' plumes.

NESTOR

 you as under an impress.

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:
 'Deliver Helen, and all damage else,
 As honour, loss of time, travail, expense,
 Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consumed
 In hot digestion of this cormorant war,
 Shall be struck off.' Hector, what say you to't?

HECTOR

Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I
As far as toucheth my particular,
Yet, dread Priam, 10
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out 'Who knows what follows?'
Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure; but modest doubt is called 15
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To th' bottom of the worst. Let Helen go.
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Every tithe soul 'mongst many thousand dismes
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours. 20
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?

TROILUS Fie, fie, my brother! 25
Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? Will you with counters sum

And buckle in a waist most fathomless 30
 With spans and inches so diminutive
 As fears and reasons? Fie, for godly shame!

HELENUS

No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
 You are so empty of them. Should not our father 35
 Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
 Because your speech hath none that tells him so?

TROIUS

You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest:
 You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:
 You know an enemy intends you harm;
 You know a sword employed is perilous, 40
 And reason flies the object of all harm.
 Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds
 A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
 The very wings of reason to his heels,
 And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, 45
 Or like a star disorbed? Nay, if we talk of reason,
 Let's shut our gates, and sleep. Manhood and honour
 Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
 With this crammed reason. Reason and respect
 Make livers pale and lustihood deject. 50

HECTOR

Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

TROIUS      What's aught but as 'tis valued?

HECTOR

TROILUS

I take to-day a wife, and my election
 Is led on in the conduct of my will;
 My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
 Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
 Of will and judgement. How may I avoid, 65

 Your breath of full consent bellied his sails;
 The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a truce, 75
 And did him service. He touched the ports desired;
 And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive
 He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness
 Wrinkles Apollo's and makes stale the morning.
 Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt. 80
 Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl,
 Whose price hath launched above a thousand ships,
 And turned crowned kings to merchants.
 If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,
 As you must needs, for you all cried 'Go, go!' 85
 If you'll confess he brought home worthy prize,

HECTOR

Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
 Of divination in our sister work
 Some touches of remorse? or is your blood 115
 So madly hot that no discourse of reason,
 Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
 Can qualify the same?

TROILUS

Why, brother Hector,

We may not think the justness of each act
 Such and no other than event doth form it; 120
 Nor once deject the courage of our minds
 Because Cassandra's mad. Her brainsick raptures
 Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
 Which hath our several honours all engaged
 To make it gracious. For my private part, 125
 I am no more touched than all Priam's sons;
 And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us
 Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
 To fight for and maintain!

PARIS

Else might the world convince of levity 130
 As well my undertakings as your counsels:
 But I attest the gods, your full consent
 Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
 All fears attending on so dire a project.
 For what, alas, can these my single arms? 135
 What propugnation is in one man's valour,
 To stand the push and enmity of those
 This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
 Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
 And had as ample power as I have will, 140
 Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
 Nor faint in the pursuit.

PRIAM

Paris, you speak

Like one besotted on your sweet delights.
 You have the honey still, but these the gall:
 So to be valiant is no praise at all. 145

PARIS

Sir, I propose not merely to myself
 The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
 But I would have the soil of her fair rape
 Wiped off in honourable keeping her.
 What treason were it to the ransacked queen, 150
 Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
 Now to deliver her possession up
 On terms of base compulsion! Can it be

That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms? 155
 There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
 Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
 When Helen is defended, nor none so noble,
 Whose life were ill bestowed, or death unfamed,
 Where Helen is the subject. Then, I say, 160
 Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
 The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

HECTOR

Paris and Troilus, you have both said well;
 And on the cause and question now in hand
 Have glozed, but superficially; not much 165
 Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
 Unfit to hear moral philosophy.
 The reasons you allege do more conduce
 To the hot passion of distempered blood,
 Than to make up a free determination 170
 'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge
 Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
 Of any true decision. Nature craves
 All dues be rendered to their owners. Now,
 What nearer debt in all humanity 175
 Than wife is to the husband? If this law
 Of nature be corrupted through affection,
 And that great minds, of partial indulgence
 To their benumb'd wills, resist the same,
 There is a law in each well-ordered nation 180
 To curb those raging appetites that are
 Most disobedient and refractory.
 If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
 As it is known she is, these moral laws
 Of nature and of nations speak aloud 185

 My spritely brethren, I propend to you 190
 In resolution to keep Helen still;
 For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
 Upon our joint and several dignities.

TROILUS

Why, there you touched the life of our design.
 Were it not glory that we more affected 195
 Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
 I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
 Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
 She is a theme of honour and renown;
 A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, 200
 Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
 And fame in time to come canonize us.
 For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
 So rich advantage of a promised glory
 As smiles upon the forehead of this action 205
 For the wide world's revenue.

HECTOR

I am yours,
 You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
 I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
 The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
 Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits. 210
 I was advertised their great general slept,
 Whilst emulation in the army crept.
 This, I presume, will wake him.

Deighton, Paradise nation 188 heavy. Hector's opinion] A. P. Rossiter thinks Hector's conversion, l. 190 f., 206 f., too sudden and that a more convincing arrangement would be to place part of Troilus's speech (But worthy Hector . . . revenue., ll. 198-206) between heavy. and Hector's opinion in l. 188. Fundamentally, this proposal is based on an appreciation that Hector, in the play, was "no weathercock" and "by no means defamed, defiled or degraded" like the other heroes (TLS, May 8, 1948). 194 Why, there] Q Why there Ff Why? there 208 roisting] Keightley proposes roistering but roisting = blustering, bullying, is correct. Enter Thersites, solus.

THERSITES How now, Thersites! What, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? He beats me, and I rail at him. O, worthy satisfaction! Would it were otherwise: that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare enginer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods, and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the Neapolitan bone-ache! for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers; and devil Envy say Amen.
 What, ho! my Lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

 ULYSSES

We saw him at the opening of his tent. 75
He is not sick.

AJAX Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart. You may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride.
But why, why? Let him show us the cause. A word, my lord.

Takes Agamemnon aside.

NESTOR What moves Ajax thus to bay at him? 80

ULYSSES Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

NESTOR Who, Thersites?

ULYSSES He.

NESTOR Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

ULYSSES No, you see, he is his argument that has his argument, 85
Achilles.

NESTOR All the better: their fraction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

ULYSSES The amity that wisdom knits not folly may easily untie.

Enter Patroclus.

Here comes Patroclus. 90

NESTOR No Achilles with him.

ULYSSES The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy. His legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

PATROCLUS

Achilles bids me say he is much sorry
If anything more than your sport and pleasure 95
Did move your greatness and this noble state
To call upon him. He hopes it is no other
But for your health and your digestion sake,
An after-dinner's breath.

 At your request a little from himself.

ULYSSES
 O Agamemnon, let it not be so!
 We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
 When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord
 That bastes his arrogance with his own seam, 170
 And never suffers matter of the world
 Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve
 And ruminate himself, shall he be worshipped
 Of that we hold an idol more than he?
 No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord 175
 Shall not so stale his palm, nobly acquired,
 Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
 As amply titled as Achilles is,
 By going to Achilles.
 That were to enlard his fat-already pride, 180

ACT III

SCENE I. TROY. A ROOM IN PRIAM'S PALACE.

Music sounds within. Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

- PANDARUS Friend, you, pray you, a word. Do you not follow the young Lord Paris?
- SERVANT Ay, sir, when he goes before me.
- PANDARUS You depend upon him, I mean?
- SERVANT Sir, I do depend upon the Lord. 5
- PANDARUS You depend upon a notable gentleman: I must needs praise him.
- SERVANT The Lord be praised!
- PANDARUS You know me, do you not?
- SERVANT Faith, sir, superficially. 10
- PANDARUS Friend, know me better: I am the Lord Pandarus.
- SERVANT I hope I shall know your honour better.
- PANDARUS I do desire it.
- SERVANT You are in the state of grace.
- PANDARUS Grace! not so, friend: honour and lordship are my 15 titles. What music is this?
- SERVANT I do but partly know, sir. It is music in parts.
- PANDARUS Know you the musicians?
- SERVANT Wholly, sir.
- PANDARUS Who play they to? 20
- SERVANT To the hearers, sir.
- PANDARUS At whose pleasure, friend?
- SERVANT At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
- PANDARUS Command, I mean, friend.

- PANDARUS Who, my cousin Cressida?
- SERVANT No, sir, Helen. Could not you find out that by her attributes?
- PANDARUS It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the 35 Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus. I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seethes.
- SERVANT Soddren business! There's a stewed phrase indeed!

- HELEN O, sir,—
 PANDARUS Rude, in sooth: in good sooth, very rude.
 PARIS Well said, my lord! Well, you say so in fits.
 PANDARUS I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word? 55
 HELEN Nay, this shall not hedge us out. We'll hear you sing, certainly.
 PANDARUS Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord. My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus— 60
 HELEN My Lord Pandarus, honey-sweet lord,— PANDARUS Go to, sweet queen, go to!—commends himself most affectionately to you—
 HELEN You shall not bob us out of our melody. If you do, our melancholy upon your head! 65
 PANDARUS Sweet queen, sweet queen, that's a sweet queen, i' faith.
 HELEN And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.
 PANDARUS Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words: no, no. And, my 70 lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
 HELEN My Lord Pandarus,—
 PANDARUS What says my sweet queen, my very very sweet queen?
 PARIS What exploit's in hand? Where sups he to-night? 75
 HELEN Nay, but, my lord,—
 PANDARUS What says my sweet queen? My cousin will fall out

I am giddy: expectation whirls me round.
Th' imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense. What will it be,
When that the wat'ry palate tastes indeed
Love's thrice-repured nectar? Death, I fear me,
Swooning destruction, or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-potent, tuned too sharp in sweetness
For the capacity of my ruder powers.

That I shall lose distinction in my joys,

- CRESSIDA Will you walk in, my lord?

- CRESSIDA Wished, my lord? The gods grant—O my lord!
- TROIUS What should they grant? What makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love? 60
- CRESSIDA More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.
- TROIUS Fears make devils of cherubins: they never see truly.
- CRESSIDA Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear. To fear the worst oft cures the worse. 65
- TROIUS O, let my lady apprehend no fear. In all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.
- CRESSIDA Nor nothing monstrous neither?
- TROIUS Nothing but our undertakings, when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers, thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite and the execution confined, that the desire is boundless and the act a slave to limit. 75
- CRESSIDA They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform, vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters? 80
- TROIUS Are there such? Such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove. Our head shall go bare till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present. We will not name desert before his birth, and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith. Troilus 85 shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth, and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

CRESSIDA Will you walk in, my lord?

Enter Pandarus.

PANDARUS What, blushing still? Have you not done talking yet? 90

CRESSIDA Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

PANDARUS I thank you for that. If my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord. If he flinch, chide me for it.

TROILUS You know now your hostages: your uncle's word and my firm faith. 95

PANDARUS Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred, though they be long ere they be wooed, they are constant being won. They are burs, I can tell you: they'll stick where they are thrown. 100

CRESSIDA

Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart.

Prince Troilus, I have loved you night and day

For many weary months.

TROILUS

Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

CRESSIDA

Hard to seem won. But I was won, my lord, 105

With the first glance that ever—pardon me:

If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.

I love you now, but till now not so much

But I might master it. In faith, I lie:

My thoughts were, like unbridled children, grown 110

Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!

Why have I blabbed? Who shall be true to us

When we are so unsecret to ourselves?

But, though I loved you well, I wooed you not;

And yet, good faith, I wished myself a man, 115

Or that we women had men's privilege

TROILUS

Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

CRESSIDA

Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love,
 And fell so roundly to a large confession 140
 To angle for your thoughts. But you are wise;
 Or else you love not, for to be wise and love
 Exceeds man's might: that dwells with gods above.

TROILUS

O that I thought it could be in a woman—
 As, if it can, I will presume in you— 145
 To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
 To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
 Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
 That doth renew swifter than blood decays!
 Or that persuasion could but thus convince me, 150
 That my integrity and truth to you
 Might be affronted with the match and weight
 Of such a winnowed purity in love:
 How were I then uplifted! But, alas!
 I am as true as truth's simplicity, 155
 And simpler than the infancy of truth.

What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune,

75

Must fall out with men too. What the declined is,

He shall as soon read in the eyes of others

As feel in his own fall. For men, like butterflies,

Show not their mealy wings but to the summer;

And not a man, for being simply man,

80

Hath any honour, but honour for those honours

That are without him, as place, riches, and favour,

Prizes of accident as oft as merit:

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,

The love that leaned on them as slippery too,

85

Doth one pluck down another and together

Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me.

Fortune and I are friends. I do enjoy

At ample point all that I did possess,

Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out

90

Something not worth in me such rich beholding

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses.

The bearer knows not, but commends itself

Not going from itself; but eye to eye opposed

Salutes each other with each other's form.

For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating Time.

That all with one consent praise new-born gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.
The present eye praises the present object.	180
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye

Is that a wonder? 195
 The providence that's in a watchful state
 Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold,
 Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive deeps,
 Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods,
 Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles. 200

 And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing
 'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,

PATROCLUS

To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you.
 A woman impudent and mannish grown
 Is not more loathed than an effeminate man
 In time of action. I stand condemned for this.
 They think my little stomach to the war 220
 And your great love to me restrains you thus.
 Sweet, rouse yourself, and the weak wanton Cupid
 Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
 And, like a dewdrop from the lion's mane,
 Be shook to air.

ACHILLES Shall Ajax fight with Hector? 225

PATROCLUS

Ay, and perhaps receive much honour by him.

ACHILLES

I see my reputation is at stake;
 My fame is shrewdly gored.

PATROCLUS

O, then, beware:

Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves.
 Omission to do what is necessary 230
 Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
 And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
 Even then when they sit idly in the sun.

ACHILLES

Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus.
 I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him 235
 T' invite the Trojan lords after the combat
 To see us here unarmed. I have a woman's longing,
 An appetite that I am sick withal,
 To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;

THERSITES A wonder!

ACHILLES What?

THERSITES Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

ACHILLES How so?

245

THERSITES He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

ACHILLES How can that be?

THERSITES Why, a stalks up and down like a peacock,—a stride 250 and a stand; ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning; bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, and 'twould out.' And so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's 255 undone for ever, for if Hector break not his neck i' th' combat, he'll break't himself in vainglory. He knows not me. I said
'Good morrow, Ajax'; and he replies 'Thanks, Agamemnon.'
What think you of this man that takes me for the General?
He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague 260 of opinion! A man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

ACHILLES Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

THERSITES Who, I? Why, he'll answer nobody: he professes not answering. Speaking is for beggars: he wears his tongue in's 265 arms. I will put on his presence. Let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

ACHILLES To him, Patroclus. Tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person 270

But when I meet you armed, as black defiance

As heart can think or courage execute.

 She hath not given so many good words breath 75
 As for her Greeks and Trojans suffered death.

SCENE II. COURT OF PANDARUS'S HOUSE

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

TROILUS

Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.

CRESSIDA

Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down:
 He shall unbolt the gates.

TROILUS

Trouble him not:
 To bed, to bed. Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
 And give as soft attachment to thy senses 5
 As infants' empty of all thought!

Good morrow, then.

O Cressida! but that the busy day,
 Waked by the lark, hath roused the ribald crows,
 And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer,
 I would not from thee. 10

CRESSIDA Night hath been too brief.

TROIUS

Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays
 As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love
 With wings more momentary-swift than thought.
 You will catch cold, and curse me.

CRESSIDA Prithee, tarry. 15

You men will never tarry.
 O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off,
 And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.

PANDARUS (within)

What! 's all the doors open here?

 I shall have such a life!

TROILUS

ÆNEAS

My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash. There is at hand

Why tell you me of moderation?
 The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
 And violenteth in a sense as strong
 As that which causeth it. How can I moderate it? 5
 If I could temporise with my affection,
 Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
 The like allayment could I give my grief.
 My love admits no qualifying dross;
 No more my grief, in such a precious loss. 10

 'O heart, heavy heart, 15
 Why sigh'st thou without breaking?'

 'Because thou canst not ease thy smart

Nor play at subtle games: fair virtues all,

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant.

 For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
 Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
 I'll cut thy throat.

Since first I saw yourself and Diomed 215
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

ULYSSES

Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue.
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that pertly front your town,
Yon towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds, 220
Must kiss their own feet.

HECTOR

I must not believe you.
There they stand yet: and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood. The end crowns all,
And that old common arbitrator, Time, 225
Will one day end it.

ULYSSES

So to him we leave it.
Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome.
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent.

ACHILLES

I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou! 230
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee:
I have with exact view perused thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.

HECTOR

Is this Achilles?

ACHILLES

I am Achilles.

HECTOR

Stand fair, I pray thee. Let me look on thee. 235

ACHILLES

Behold thy fill.

HECTOR

Nay, I have done already.

ACHILLES

Thou art too brief. I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach whereout 245
Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!

HECTOR

It would discredit the blest gods, proud man.
To answer such a question. Stand again!
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture 250
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

ACHILLES

I tell thee, yea.

HECTOR

Wert thou an oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm, 255
I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag:
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

AJAX

Do not chafe thee, cousin. 260

And you, Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident or purpose bring you to't.
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him. 265

HECTOR

I pray you, let us see you in the field.
We have had pelting wars since you refused
The Grecians' cause.

SCENE I. THE GRECIAN CAMP. BEFORE ACHILLES' TENT.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

ACHILLES

I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,
Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

PATROCLUS

Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

ACHILLES

How now, thou core of envy!

Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

THERSITES Why, thou picture of what thou seem'st, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

ACHILLES From whence, fragment?

THERSITES Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

PATROCLUS Who keeps the tent now?

10

THERSITES The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

PATROCLUS Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

THERSITES Prithee, be silent, boy: I profit not by thy talk. Thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

PATROCLUS Male varlet, you rogue! What's that?

15

THERSITES Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases

TROILUS

Now the pledge: now, now, now!

CRESSIDA

Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

65

TROILUS

O beauty! where is thy faith?

ULYSSES

My lord,—

TROILUS

I will be patient: outwardly I will.

CRESSIDA

You look upon that sleeve: behold it well.

He loved me—O false wench!—Give't me again.

DIOMEDES

Whose was't?

70

CRESSIDA

It is no matter, now I ha't again.

I will not meet with you to-morrow night.

I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.

THERSITES

Now she sharpens. Well said, whetstone!

DIOMEDES

I shall have it.

CRESSIDA

What, this?

DIOMEDES

Ay, that.

75

CRESSIDA

O, all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking on his bed

Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my glove,

And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,

As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from me:

80

He that takes that doth take my heart withal.

DIOMEDES

I had your heart before: this follows it.

Of every syllable that here was spoke. 115

Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?

Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,

An esperance so obstinately strong

Let it not be believed for womanhood!
 Think, we had mothers: do not give advantage
 To stubborn critics, apt without a theme
 For depravation, to square the general sex 130
 By Cressid's rule. Rather think this not Cressid.

ULYSSES

What hath she done, Prince, that can soil our mothers?

TROILUS

Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

THERSITES

Will a swagger himself out on's own eyes?

TROILUS

This she? No, this is Diomed's Cressida. 135
 If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
 If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies,
 If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
 If there be rule in unity itself,
 This is not she. O madness of discourse, 140
 That cause sets up with and against itself!
 Bifold authority! where reason can revolt
 Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
 Without revolt. This is, and is not, Cressid!
 Within my soul there doth conduce a fight 145
 Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate
 Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
 And yet the spacious breadth of this division
 Admits no orifice for a point as subtle

 And with another knot, five-finger-tied, 155
 The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
 The fragments, scraps, the bits and greasy relics
 Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so loved and the performance so loathed? What verse for it? What instance for it? Let me see:

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdued in arméd tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths:

As many as be here of Pandar's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade, 50
Some two months hence my will shall here be made.
It should be now, but that my fear is this,
Some galléd goose of Winchester would hiss.

And at that time bequeath you my diseases. Exit. 55

APPENDIX TO TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

A never writer, to an ever reader. News.<sup>1</sup>

ETernal reader, you have here a new play, never staled with the Stage, never clapper-clawed with the palms of the vulgar, and yet passing full of the palm comical; for it is a birth of your<sup>2</sup> brain that never undertook anything comical, vainly: And were but the vain names of comedies changed for the titles of Commodities, or of Plays for Pleas; you should see all those grand censors, that now style them such vanities, flock to them for the main grace of their gravities: especially this author's Comedies, that are so framed to the life, that they serve for the most common Commentaries of all the actions of our lives, showing such a dexterity and power of wit that the most displeased with Plays are pleased with his Comedies. And all such dull and heavy-witted worldlings as were never capable of the wit of a Comedy, coming by report of them to his representations, have found that wit there that they never found in themselves, and have parted better witted than they came: feeling an edge of wit set upon them more than ever they dreamed they had brain to grind it on. So much and such savoured salt of wit is in his Comedies that they seem (for their height of pleasure) to be born in that sea that brought forth Venus. Amongst all there is none more witty than this: And had I time I would comment upon it, though I know it needs not (for so much as will make you think your testern well bestowed) but for so much worth as even poor I know to be stuffed in it. It deserves such a labour as well as the best Comedy in Terence or Plautus. And believe this, that when he is gone and his Comedies out of sale, you will scramble for them and set up a new English Inquisition. Take this for a warning and, at the peril of your pleasure's loss and judgements, refuse not, nor like this the less, for not being sullied with the smoky breath of the multitude; but thank fortune for the scape it hath made amongst you, since by the grand possessors' wills I believe you should have prayed for them rather than been prayed. And so I leave all such to be prayed for (for the states of their wit's healths) that will not praise it.

Vale.

OTHELLO

Q<sup>1</sup> of Othello was the first published after the Troilus and Pericles Quartos of 1609. The entry in the Stationers' Registers was: 6<sup>o</sup> Octobris, 1621. Thomas Walkley. Entred for his copie vnder the handes of Sir George Buck, and Master Swinhoe warden, The Tragedie of Othello, the moore of Venice. vj<sup>d</sup>.<sup>1</sup> Q<sup>1</sup> was published with title-page: The Tragædy of Othello, The Moore of Venice. As it hath beene diuerse times acted at the Globe, and at the Black Friers, by his Maiesties Seruants. Written by VVilliam Shakespeare. [Device] LONDON, Printed by N[icholas]. O[kes]. for Thomas Walkley, and are to be sold at his shop, at the Eagle and Child, in Brittans Bursse. 1622.<sup>2</sup> On Sig. A2r Walkley printed an address which reads as follows:

The Stationer to the Reader.

To set forth a booke without an Epistle, were like to the old English prouerbe, A blew coat without a badge, & the Author being dead, I thought good to take that piece of worke vpon mee: To commend it, I will not, for that which is good, I hope euery man will commend, without intreaty: and I am the bolder, because the Authors name is sufficient to vent his worke. Thus leauing euery one to the liberty of iudgement: I haue ventered to print this Play, and leaue it to the generall censure.

Yours, Thomas VValkley.

Walkley's publication occurred during a lull in the setting-up and printing of the Folio, and Willoughby suggests that the Players authorised Walkley in a moment of irritation at this delay.<sup>3</sup> In any case, Walkley acquired rights in Q<sup>1</sup>, a very different text from F which the Players published; and these rights he transferred on March 1, 1627,<sup>4</sup> to Richard Hawkins, who produced Q<sup>2</sup> in 1630 with a different device and imprint: LONDON, Printed by A[ugustine]. M[athewes]. for Richard Hawkins, and are to be sold at his shoppe in Chancery-Lane, neere Sergeants-Inne. 1630.<sup>5</sup> Q<sup>2</sup>, quotations from which are given in our footnotes, was prepared by altering a copy of Q<sup>1</sup> by means of F<sup>1</sup>, so adopting passages omitted in Q<sup>1</sup> and incorporating many of F's different readings. Q<sup>2</sup> is interesting as the work of an early editor conflating two primitive texts, but has no independent textual authority.<sup>6</sup>

Rhodes, Ridley, Hinman and others hold that Q and F derive from independent MSS., and Rhodes thinks that a prompt-book underlies F.<sup>1</sup> Chambers's view is that F represents the original MS. and that Q is from a faulty transcript.<sup>2</sup> Cameron suggests that F may be from a discarded MS. or presentation copy of the play.<sup>3</sup> There must have been, in any case, a common original ultimately underlying the Q and F versions, as Ridley, Spencer and others have supposed.<sup>4</sup> Finally, in 1952, Dr. Alice Walker produced evidence that F<sup>1</sup> was printed from a corrected printed copy of Q<sup>1</sup>, such evidence being bibliographical, orthographical and based upon common textual errors.<sup>5</sup> Greg agrees that Dr. Walker makes out a case for this use of Q<sup>1</sup> in printing F<sup>1</sup>; but is not disposed to agree with her that Q<sup>1</sup> may be the work of a theatre book-keeper who relied on his knowledge of the play as acted and his invention where memory failed.<sup>6</sup> However Q<sup>1</sup> came into existence, the fact remains that Heming and Condell, who claimed to supervise the preparation of copy for F<sup>1</sup> and who had intimate knowledge of Shakespeare's theatre and accessibility to theatre copy, found it necessary to correct Q<sup>1</sup> from a source which was presumably closer to Shakespeare's work as they knew it. This, and the obvious superiority of F in most passages, as shown in our footnotes, renders it essential to base the modern text almost entirely on F. In the Folio the play succeeds Lear and precedes Antony and Cleopatra: it is there divided into Acts and Scenes corresponding to our divisions, except that F's II ii covers our II ii and iii. An unusual fault in certain copies of F, involving repetition in page 333 of a line in page 332 and mutilation of the text, together with correction in script of the same, was described by Charlton Hinman in The Library.<sup>7</sup> Parallel texts of Q<sup>1</sup> and F<sup>1</sup> with readings from Q<sup>2</sup> were published by Schröer in 1909.<sup>8</sup> Q<sup>3</sup>, based on Q<sup>2</sup>, was printed for William Leak in 1655, and on the title-page is called the Fourth Edition.<sup>9</sup> To sum up what appears to be the nature of the principal texts: Q<sup>1</sup> seems to be derived from a transcript which may revert to an earlier authentic version and have been subject to copyist's and printer's slips, to cuts, and some deliberate changes; F<sup>1</sup> results from the Folio editors' attempts to bring Q<sup>1</sup>, for printing purposes, into line with a later and more authentic version, with some changes and minor omissions; Q<sup>2</sup> is an editor's attempt to combine Q<sup>1</sup> and F<sup>1</sup>; and Q<sup>3</sup>, based on Q<sup>2</sup>, has no real textual value.

syllables (208); yet, one of the poorest in light and weak endings and rather poor, for the period, in run-on lines.<sup>1</sup> The proportion of rhyme, used principally to round off speeches and lend dignity and point, is moderate. The dramatic effectiveness of the verse's changing rhythms, its flexibility and its rich and specialised vocabulary have often been praised.<sup>2</sup> Caroline Spurgeon showed that the main imagery is that of animals preying on one another, repellent creatures, wild cats, wolves, goats, monkeys, reptiles and others, and wanton torture;<sup>3</sup> and Mikhail M. Morozov demonstrates that such imagery, proper to Iago, becomes characteristic of Othello's speech after III iii 93, when Iago gains ascendancy over Othello's soul, until, at the end, Othello becomes himself again.<sup>4</sup> In a play dealing with Venice, sea-imagery is especially appropriate: it is mostly Iago who employs it. Othello's speech, indicative of his character, is of vast scope, often expressed in grandiose terms and enriched by exotic imagery allied to the mythical and the marvellous, changing at times to simple words of great force and dignity. As an inveterate realist, Iago speaks much in prose. There are frequent allusions to the demoniac, both by and in relation to Iago.<sup>5</sup> Henley, writing of Othello, described soliloquy as abominable to the play-going mind:<sup>6</sup> but the play's fifteen soliloquies help greatly in characterisation and contribute to the power of the tragedy. The play lends itself to allegorical interpretation and symbolism, such as Wilson Knight's summation, "Othello, Desdemona, and Iago are Man, the Divine, and the Devil."<sup>7</sup> Rich as the vocabulary is, the language turns for powerful effect at the great crises to the simple and monosyllabic. The scant humour is of a kind designed for the play: the Clown, played no doubt by Armin, and intended, as Douce said, to be a domestic Fool,<sup>8</sup> appears in III i and III iv between the crises and storms of passion; in both instances to act as messenger. The other brief interlude is the talk between Desdemona and Iago in II i 101 f., whilst they await Othello's landing. This has not been understood: it is an excellent example of the Elizabethan pastime of Giving Themes, in which Summers and Tarlton were reputed experts, and in which the superior (in this case Desdemona) sets a theme and the respondent (Iago) replies, usually satirically, in extempore rhyme.<sup>9</sup> Underlying this particular dialogue is Desdemona's anxious thought for storm-tossed Othello, and in it Iago reveals his adroit wit and resource and certain of his ideas which are to be of importance later. The play is shot through with irony, based largely, as Cazamian<sup>1</sup> says, on the contrast between faces and masks,<sup>2</sup> most of it connected with Iago. In this, as in other plays, a few inconsistencies have been detected: Cassio in i i 21 is said to have a wife, but Bianca evidently replaces her;<sup>3</sup> the famous handkerchief is said in iii iv 53 to have been given to Othello's mother by an Egyptian wise-woman, and in v ii 219 to have been given by his father. But recognition of the play's masterly construction is well-nigh universal. It is all of a piece, devoid of subplot and extraneous matter, the whole of it turning on Act iii, Scene iii, a scene unrivalled for dramatic power and development, to which all before in the action inevitably leads up, and from which the dénouement inexorably follows. Act i is a dramatic entity in which the unities are respected; from it are developed Acts ii to v in which the unities are but little departed from: and in no other Shakespearian play is the unity of action so definitely observed throughout.

The problem of time within the play occurs in the case of Romeo and other Shakespearian dramas: and Othello is the classical case. Christopher North (Prof. John Wilson) discussed this Othello problem in 1849 and 1850 in Blackwood's.<sup>4</sup> We are to imagine that some events in the play proceed according to the timing of one clock, and others according to the different pace of another: hence the term double clock-time or double time applied to the progress of the drama. The Cowden Clarkes made a prolonged study of this problem, using the terms Short Time and Long Time.<sup>5</sup> None of these terms adequately defines the matter. In Othello Act i covers one evening; in Acts ii-v the parties land in Cyprus and the tragic end comes within a day and a half; but references to Desdemona's relations with Cassio, Cassio's with Bianca and Iago, Iago's with Roderigo, and Othello's with various others give either the statement or the definite impression of much longer periods in these respects. The dramatist in developing the fable was faced with the problem that Iago's plot, to succeed, and the passions which it aroused, demanded the precipitate speed which he gave them; while the interrelations of the characters required maturity of intercourse in order to be plausible. But "double time" is not enough. The attention of the spectator throughout the action in Othello is, with notable frequency, switched back and forth to the past and future (which conveys the impression of action when none may be taking place).<sup>1</sup> This is one time element. Reference is also made to hours, days and periods within the scope of the action; and this, called clock-time, is actually manipulated time proceeding at varying pace, and may be called dramatic clock-time. These time elements are, however, accessory to the fundamental time of the play, shared alike by the actors and spectators, which is Living Duration; and the pace of this is inconstant. The fact that, in the theatre, discrepancy in the various time-elements remains unnoticed, is because the attention is occupied with this fundamental time. Clearly, in drama, we are dealing with multiple time.

130, etc. <sup>1</sup>Cazamian, 176. <sup>2</sup>Gildon stated that, for the benefit of a popular comedian playing Iago, Sh. put some passages, perhaps unsuitable for the part, into the play; and Chambers suggests these lines in ii i may be intended (Chambers: WS, i 461, ii 261). H. C. Hart unnecessarily suspected the lines to be by "an inferior hand" (Hart: O, xv). <sup>3</sup>See note to i i 21. Similarly Cassio, who had accompanied Othello in his visits to Brabantio's house when he wooed Desdemona (iii iii 72), yet knows nothing of his marriage (i ii 52). Bradley, 433, suggests that Cassio may only be pretending ignorance. See also iii iii 95 f. <sup>4</sup>Furness reprints most of North, pp. 361-370. See also papers in New Sh. Socy. Trans., 1875-6, including Halpin's. <sup>5</sup>Cowden Clarke: Key, 105-283. Tolman, 204, finds that the Othello time-scheme disturbs the probability. Empson, 240, says that technique of long and short time is used extravagantly in the play; and Stoll: O, 48, remarks that with a double clock there is little foundation for theories of psychology in Othello.

Othello was presented before James I in the Banqueting Hall in Whitehall on 1 November, 1604,<sup>2</sup> and many modern editors adopt 1604 as the play's date.<sup>3</sup> Parrott supposes the play written in 1603-4 during the closing of the theatres as the result of plague.<sup>4</sup> A conjectured allusion to Othello in The Honest Whore by Dekker and Middleton (1604)<sup>5</sup> led Alfred Hart to urge at least 1603 as date for the play; more important, undoubted echoes of Othello in the bad Quarto of Hamlet, published in 1603, support the adoption of that year.<sup>6</sup> Warburton concluded that in iv 43, "But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts," referred to James I's creation in 1611 of Baronets who could bear a hand gules in their 'scutcheon; and a few editors agreed with Warburton on that date for the play;<sup>7</sup> but, if the reference to James I's Baronets is correct, the passage is certainly a late insertion; and there is good reason to reject Warburton's thesis. It would seem that 1603 is probably correct.<sup>8</sup>

There have been the usual suggestions that Shakespeare's source was an earlier play.<sup>9</sup> The actual source was Novel VII of the Third

on another count, and dies. Shakespeare created Brabantio and the Venetian nobles; evolved Roderigo from a soldier on whom Cassio drew his sword (for which he was, in Cinthio, degraded); and made Bianca by combining the woman in Cassio's house with the meretrice (strumpet) whom he visited. Shakespeare gave Iago new motives, as well as his innate evil impulses: these motives are the promotion of Cassio and suspicion that Othello and Cassio had immoral relations with Emilia. He compressed the fundamental time and speeded the action.<sup>1</sup> His 'local colour' is so good that it convinced Grillo that he visited Italy.<sup>2</sup>

Thomas Rymer, devoted to unities, decorum and moral precept in drama, condemned Othello as lacking all these, and called it a "Bloody Farce, without salt or savour."<sup>3</sup> Macaulay thought the play "perhaps the greatest work in the world," and Rymer the worst critic.<sup>4</sup> Absurd as much of Rymer's criticism is, it contains observations which have found new utterance, especially the "improbability of the fable."<sup>5</sup> George Henry Lewes in 1875 wrote that a defect in the play was the rapidity with which, and the slight grounds on which, Othello is made to believe in his wife's guilt;<sup>6</sup> and William Archer in 1912 thought that Othello succumbed with incredible facility.<sup>7</sup> Stoll's view is that though by his art Shakespeare produced in Othello one of the greatest of all stage-contrasts, with great dramatic effect, the change from the noble and trustful Othello into the jealous and brutal victim of Iago's temptation is inadequately motivated.<sup>8</sup> He thinks no explanation possible in terms of psychology: the demands of the plot determine the characters and incidents; and the plot is shaped according to the convention, seen also in Much Ado, Lear, Cymbeline, Philaster and other plays and common in folklore, that the hero implicitly accepts the word of the calumniator. A convenient tragical blindness overcomes the victim: so that Othello, quite improbably, trusts Iago, distrusts Emilia, and mistrusts his lifelong friend Cassio and his devoted wife; and Emilia as readily fails to recognise what happens around her and to speak of it. The main question thus arises whether Shakespeare's Othello is shown to be such a man before the temptation her death, for Desdemona to commit adultery. <sup>1</sup>For convenience the names used in Shakespeare have been used in this account: the only person named in Cinthio is Disdemona. <sup>2</sup>Grillo, 132 f., Elze, 125, 419, Brandes, 113, among others, also think so; Boas, 424, states that local colour is missing; Creizenach, 159, ascribes any local colour to the reader, not the poet. (iii) that Iago's calumny could transform him into the Othello of Acts iv and v.

Some critics have shown a tendency to simplify the whole situation by chivalric and sentimental vindication of Othello which seems to ignore some facts about him. Swinburne called him "the noblest man of man's making"; Brandes, a great man who is a great child; Raleigh, a man after Shakespeare's own heart, "tender, generous, brave and utterly magnanimous"; Fluchère, a man of most noble characteristics, devotion to the state and spiritual love untarnished by sensuality; Chambers, a simple open-hearted soldier, noble and gracious; and Spencer calls him "a normal man."<sup>1</sup> There have been many quite different voices. Cinthio (in his tale) described him as Barbaro;<sup>2</sup> Maeterlinck writes of la naïveté et la crédulité d'un demi-barbare;<sup>3</sup> Thackeray thought him a union of dissimilar natures, "a civilised barbarian."<sup>4</sup> Bradley calls him the greatest poet among the heroes, smitten by jealousy which liberates the beast in man; Kreider thinks he lacks self-control; Baldensperger thinks him a fétichiste. Van Doren describes him as superior to passion and its slave, a man with a jungle within, a great gentleman and a barbarian. Wilson Knight sees in him nothing particularly primitive or of negroid savagery, but having moments of barbaric fury and others of neurotic disgust and some of delirium.<sup>5</sup>

Now Othello is a black of princely origin, as jet-black as the Longleat drawing of Aaron the Moor in Titus Andronicus.<sup>6</sup> He himself and those who know him declare his blackness: and in the Shakespearian world the badge of Hell and the devil's garb are black, and death has a black veil; vengeance, envy, despair, villainy are black; so are witches and necromancers, pagans, Nemesis, incest; black night brings abominable deeds; and beetles, toads and flies are black. Othello is an ominous figure to start with and as such the audience would recognise him; but yet a brave and experienced mercenary with great power of command and a romantic history which leads to marriage with a Venetian beauty. The marriage inspires horror and foreboding, of all of which Othello is conscious; its discussion has precedence over state business in the Council, and gives rise, so strange it is, to questions of necromancy. Othello is imaginative, and, beneath his usual exterior dignity and calm, he is emotional; his reaction to accusation, as afterwards when smitten with emotional crises, is a flight into impressive poetic rhetoric and exotic imagery. He talks of seeing anthropophagi, cannibals, monstrous men, antres vast—fantastic lies, Iago the realist calls them—just as, at an even greater crisis, he is to talk of the perfect chrysolite, the sword of Isebrooke's temper, steep-down gulfs of liquid fire, the base Indian and his pearl, and the rest. Then, too, the famous handkerchief comes from an Egyptian wise-woman, was sewn by a sybil, is woven of silk from hallowed silkworms and dyed in a conserve of the hearts of mummified maidens. All this is significant: of a free and open nature Othello assuredly was, as a rule; resolute amidst carnage, a man whom it seemed passion could not shake; but deep in the man was fierce emotion, ordinarily controlled, and amazing credulity, not so easy to master. Such emotion and such credulity, under suitable provocation—provided by Iago—are calculated to make deception possible; and from Iago's deception springs jealousy finding release in action through all its attendant vices. No simple formula expresses Othello: he is strangely complex; but not the impossible creature that some have called him.

Iago has fascinated the critics and has occupied many pages in the company of Satan and Machiavelli, associated, and rightly so, with the charge of inexpiable villainy. It is notable that he has tools, but no accomplices, and merits more than Richard Crookback the description "I am myself alone." Tucker Brooke treats him with questionable generosity, and writes of the poet's original plan of "the tragedy of the honest, charming soldier, who swallowed the devil's bait of self-indulgence, grew blind to ideal beauty, and in his blindness overthrew more than his enemies."<sup>1</sup> Fault has been found, amidst much justified admiring comment, with that innocent child of undeserved misfortune, Desdemona: she is declared untruthful, she is said to lack intellect and self-respect, she is secretive, she meddles in her husband's military affairs.<sup>2</sup> The play is noted as the most modern and realistic of Shakespeare's dramas. It has afflicted some good men grievously. Lamb found something revolting in the courtship and caresses of Othello and Desdemona in the theatre. Johnson was glad to come to the end of the murder scene and called it dreadful, not to be endured.<sup>3</sup> Halliwell-Phillipps observed that the last scene and Iago's revolting character rendered the study of Othello rather a painful duty than a pleasure; and Furness thereupon added that inexhaustible poetry could not countervail the unutterable agony of the last scene, and he wished the play had never been written.<sup>4</sup> Meantime, Moody E. Prior has written a timely reminder that analysis of character is insufficient in the study of Othello, which demands recognition of the cumulative interrelations of character and incident, each developing and clarifying the other.<sup>5</sup>

THE TRAGEDY OF
OTHELLO
THE MOOR OF VENICE

ACT I

SCENE I. VENICE. A STREET.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

RODERIGO

Tush, never tell me; I take it much unkindly
That you, Iago, who has had my purse
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

IAGO

'Sblood, but you will not hear me:
If ever I did dream of such a matter, 5
Abhor me.

RODERIGO

Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

IAGO

Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant, 10
Off-capped to him: and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place.
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them with a bombast circumstance
Horribly stuffed with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion, 15
Nonsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,' says he,
'I have already chose my officer.'
And what was he?

21 damned . . . wife;] Many attempts at elucidation, for which see Furness, 5-10. Theobald thought this a reference to Emilia, and, supposing Iago a Florentine, read ("the Florentine's A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;"). Steevens, Malone and others have seen in wife an oblique reference to Bianca: but Iago speaks in Venice and Cassio knew Bianca later in Cyprus. Cowden-Clarke and Flatter: O, 61 f., understand that wife meant woman. Johnson thought the phrase must "be resigned to corruption and obscurity"; and Furness agreed. Iago's remark is based on proverbs known in Italian and English: see Tilley: H, 657; W, 377. Hart quotes the Italian: L'hai tolta bella? Tuo danno. In Cinthio's novel it is said that Cassio haveva . . . una donna in casa, a lady in his house, who was a great embroiderer and resolved to copy Desdemona's handkerchief. Though, in this respect, this lady corresponds to Bianca, she must be distinct from the meretrice (strumpet) whom, in Cinthio, Cassio visited. In the above passage donna was translated by W. Parr (Collier, ii 17; Hazlitt: Sh. Lib. I, ii, 301), as woman; but by J. E. Taylor (Furness, 385) as wife,—possibly because of wife in our i i 21. It has come about that some modern scholars, either led by Taylor, or themselves translating donna as wife, state that in Cinthio, Cassio has a wife. It seems likely, from i i 21, that Shakespeare so understood donna; and Granville-Barker (GB 4, p. 3) and Stoll, 28, both state that, in Cinthio, Cassio was married. RODERIGO

What, ho, Brabantio! Signior Brabantio, ho!

IAGO

Awake! what, ho, Brabantio! thieves! thieves! thieves!
Look to your house, your daughter and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

BRABANTIO

What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?

RODERIGO

Signior, is all your family within?

85

IAGO

Are your doors locked?

BRABANTIO

Why, wherefore ask you this?

IAGO

'Zounds, sir, y'are robbed; for shame, put on your gown;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul.
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise!
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.
Arise, I say.

RODERIGO

My name is Roderigo.

BRABANTIO

The worser welcome!

I have charged thee not to haunt about my doors.

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say

My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draughts,

100

Upon malicious bravery dost thou come

To start my quiet.

RODERIGO

Sir, sir, sir,—

BRABANTIO But thou must needs be sure

My spirit and my place have in them power

To make this bitter to thee.

RODERIGO

Patience, good sir.

BRABANTIO

What tell'st thou me of robbing? This is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

RODERIGO

Most grave Brabantio,

In simple and pure soul I come to you.

IAGO

God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service 110

- RODERIGO
Sir, I will answer anything. But I beseech you, 120
If't be your pleasure and most wise consent,
As partly I find it is, that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' th' night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier, 125
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe 130
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence.
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt,
Tying her duty, beauty, wit and fortunes, 135
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger
Of here and everywhere. Straight satisfy yourself:
If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

BRABANTIO

O thou foul thief, where hast thou stowed my daughter?
 Damned as thou art, thou hast enchanted her;
 For I'll refer me to all things of sense, 65
 If she in chains of magic were not bound,
 Whether a maid so tender, fair and happy,
 So opposite to marriage that she shunned
 The wealthy curl'd darlings of our nation,
 Would ever have, to incur a general mock, 70
 Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom
 Of such a thing as thou,—to fear, not to delight.
 Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense
 That thou hast practised on her with foul charms,
 Abused her delicate youth with drugs or minerals
 That weakens motion. I'll have't disputed on; 75
 'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
 I therefore apprehend and do attach thee
 For an abuser of the world, a practiser
 Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.

 Subdue him at his peril.

Now, what's the business?

SAILOR

The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes: 15
 So was I bid report here to the state
 By Signior Angelo.

DUKE

How say you by this change?

FIRST SENATOR

This cannot be,

By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant
 To keep us in false gaze. When we consider 20
 The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk,
 And let ourselves again but understand
 That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
 So may he with more facile question bear it,
 For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
 But altogether lacks th' abilities 25
 That Rhodes is dressed in: if we make thought of this,
 We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
 To leave that latest which concerns him first,

BRABANTIO

So did I yours. Good your Grace, pardon me:
Neither my place nor aught I heard of business
Hath raised me from my bed, nor doth the general care 55
Take hold on me; for my particular grief
Is of so floodgate and o'erbearing nature
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

BRABANTIO

Ay, to me;

 Your special mandate for the state affairs
 Hath hither brought.

DUKE (to Othello)

What in your own part can you say to this?

BRABANTIO Nothing, but this is so. 75

OTHELLO

Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
 My very noble and approved good masters:
 That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
 It is most true: true, I have married her:
 The very head and front of my offending 80
 Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
 And little blest with the soft phrase of peace;
 For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
 Till now some nine moons wasted, they have used
 Their dearest action in the tented field; 85
 And little of this great world can I speak,
 More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
 And therefore little shall I grace my cause
 In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience,

65 DUKE] Flatter, 33, urges that the Duke should pause here before he makes Brabantio his own judge on a charge entailing sentence of death, and that the missing half-line in l. 64 indicates the pause. 69 your] Q<sup>1</sup>.<sup>2</sup> its Cam, etc. your Ridley its yea, though] From Ff. I will a round unvarnished tale deliver 90
 Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,
 What conjuration and what mighty magic—
 For such proceedings am I charged withal—
 I won his daughter.

BRABANTIO A maiden never bold;
 Of spirit so still and quiet that her motion 95
 Blushed at herself; and she—in spite of nature,
 Of years, of country, credit, everything—
 To fall in love with what she feared to look on!
 It is a judgement maimed and most imperfect
 That will confess perfection so could err 100
 Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
 To find out practices of cunning hell,
 Why this should be. I therefore vouch again
 That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
 Or with some dram conjured to this effect, 105
 He wrought upon her.

DUKE To vouch this is no proof,
 Without more certain and more overt test
 Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
 Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

FIRST SENATOR
 But, Othello, speak: 110
 Did you by indirect and forcéd courses

I think this tale would win my daughter too.
 Good Brabantio,

 Where most you owe obedience?

DESDEMONA My noble father, 180
 I do perceive here a divided duty:
 To you I am bound for life and education;
 My life and education both do learn me
 How to respect you; you are the lord of duty;
 I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband. 185

 So much I challenge that I may profess

- BRABANTIO                      God bu'y, I ha' done.
 Please it your Grace, on to the state affairs: 190
 I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
 Come hither, Moor:
 I here do give thee that with all my heart
 Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
 I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel, 195
 I am glad at soul I have no other child;
 For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
 To hang clogs on them. I have done, my lord.
- DUKE
 Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence
 Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers 200
 Into your favour.
 When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
 By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
 To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
 Is the next way to draw new mischief on. 205
 What cannot be preserved when fortune takes,
 Patience her injury a mock'ry makes.
 The robbed that smiles steals something from the thief;
 He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.
- BRABANTIO
 So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile: 210
 We lose it not so long as we can smile.
 He bears the sentence well that nothing bears
 But the free comfort which from thence he hears;
 But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow
 That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow. 215
 These sentences, to sugar or to gall,
 Being strong on both sides, are equivocal.
 But words are words: I never yet did hear

Many conjectures and emendations regarding comply, affects and defunct Knight and Flatter explain comply as 'supply'; Onions as 'fulfil, accomplish.' Theobald and Knight explained affects as 'affections'; Daniel glossed young affects as "[that] which affects the young"; Onions as "youthful inclinations"; Schmidt as "desires of youth." Upton understood defunct as "almost dead"; Knight as 'functional'; Tollet would read defenc'd; Malone disjunct (=separate); Theobald, etc. distinct Schmidt glosses defunct as 'deadened' and satisfaction as 'gratification.' Upton first proposed me for my. A common form of ll. 262, 263 (Cam, Kittredge, Alexander) is:

Nor to comply with heat—the young affects
In me defunct—and proper satisfaction;

Craig, Mason are similar, reading heat,— defunct,— Delius retains my defunct but has heat, . . . affects, and Hart, Ridley, NCE retain my defunct and heat, Chambers has me defunct, and heat, Dashes or brackets have arisen from the commas in Q<sup>1</sup>. There seems no need of them: taking comply= "fulfil," young affects= "youthful inclinations," in= "in the case of" (see Abbott, 162), and defunct= "deadened", a paraphrase is: Nor to fulfil with ardour youthful inclinations in the case of my own (now) deadened (powers of) gratification. RODERIGO What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so 315 fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

IAGO Virtue! a fig! 'Tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs 320 or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most prepos- 325 terous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

RODERIGO It cannot be.

IAGO It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the 330 will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness. I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow thou the wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard. 335
I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Desdemona should continue her love to the Moor—put money in thy purse —nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration:—put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills:—fill thy 340

My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him. If thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu. 360

 News, lads! our wars are done. 20
 The desperate tempest hath so banged the Turk
 That their designment halts. A noble ship of Venice

With foul and violent tempest.

MONTANO

Pray heavens he be;

For I have served him, and the man commands 35

CASSIO

Most fortunately: he hath achieved a maid
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens, unintelligible and suggested "Therefore my hopes, not forfeited to death, Stand bold, not sure." In spite of paraphrases by Steevens, Collier, Hudson and others, Furness also found the lines unintelligible. Knight explained by help of Proverbs xiii 12: "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick"; and Kittredge, using the same passage, explains that "Hope is surfeited to death when it has lasted so long that it changes to despair." bold cure=a healthy condition. IAGO

She never yet was foolish that was fair;
 For even her folly helped her to an heir.

DESDEMONA These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i'

IAGO

She that was ever fair and never proud,
 Had tongue at will and yet was never loud,
 Never lacked gold and yet went never gay, 150
 Fled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may';
 She that, being angered, her revenge being nigh,

CASSIO He speaks home, madam: you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar. 165

IAGO (aside) He takes her by the palm. Ay, well said, whisper. With as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do: I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true: 'tis so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good, well kissed! and excellent courtesy! 'Tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? Would they were clyster-pipes for your sake!— (Trumpets within.) The Moor! CASSIO 'Tis truly so.

DESDEMONA Let's meet him and receive him.

OTHELLO

It gives me wonder great as my content 180
 To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!
 If after every tempest come such calms,
 May the winds blow till they have wakened death!
 And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas
 Olympus-high and duck again as low 185
 As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
 'Twere now to be most happy; for I fear
 My soul hath her content so absolute
 That not another comfort like to this
 Succeeds in unknown fate.

DESDEMONA The heavens forbid 190
 But that our loves and comforts should increase
 Even as our days do grow!

OTHELLO Amen to that, sweet powers!
 I cannot speak enough of this content;
 It stops me here; it is too much of joy.
 And this, and this, the greatest discords be 195

They kiss.

That e'er our hearts shall make!

IAGO (aside) O, you are well tuned now!
 But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,
 As honest as I am.

OTHELLO Come, let us to the castle.
 News, friends: our wars are done, the Turks are drowned.
 How does my old acquaintance of this isle? 200
 Honey, you shall be well desired in Cyprus:
 I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
 I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
 In mine own comforts. I prithee, good Iago,

 Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,
 Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exeunt all but Iago and Roderigo.

IAGO Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come 210 hither. If thou be'st valiant—as, they say, base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them—list me. The Lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard. First, I must tell thee this: Desdemona is directly in love with him. 215

RODERIGO With him! why, 'tis not possible.

IAGO Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed.
 Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies: and will she love him still for prating? Let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must 220 be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil?
 When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required 225 conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor: very nature will instruct her in it and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted—as it is a most pregnant and CASSIO Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

IAGO Not this hour, Lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o' th' clock.

Our General cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona; who let us not therefore blame. He hath not yet made wanton 15
the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

CASSIO She's a most exquisite lady.

IAGO And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

CASSIO Indeed she's a most fresh and delicate creature.

IAGO What an eye she has! Methinks it sounds a parley to 20 provocation.

CASSIO An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

IAGO And when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?

CASSIO She is indeed perfection.

IAGO Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, Lieutenant, I 25 have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black
Othello.

CASSIO Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking. I could well wish courtesy would invent 30 some other custom of entertainment.

IAGO O, they are our friends: but one cup, I'll drink for you.

CASSIO I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and behold what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness 35 with any more.

IAGO What, man! 'tis a night of revels. The gallants desire it.

CASSIO Where are they?

IAGO

If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
 With that which he hath drunk to-night already,
 He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
 As my young mistress' dog. Now my sick fool Roderigo,
 Whom love hath turned almost the wrong side out, 45
 To Desdemona hath to-night caroused
 Potations pottle-deep; and he's to watch.
 Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits,
 That hold their honours in a wary distance,
 The very elements of this warlike Isle, 50
 Have I to-night flustered with flowing cups,
 And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,
 Am I to put our Cassio in some action
 That may offend the Isle. But here they come.
 If consequence do but approve my dream, 55
 My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Enter Cassio; with him Montano and Gentlemen; Servants following with wine.

CASSIO 'Fore God, they have given me a rouse already.

MONTANO Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

IAGO Some wine, ho! 60

Some wine, boys!

CASSIO 'Fore God, an excellent song.

IAGO I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting. Your Dane, your German, and your swagbellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English. 70

CASSIO Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

IAGO Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

CASSIO To the health of our General! 75

MONTANO I am for it, Lieutenant, and I'll do you justice.

IAGO O sweet England!

MONTANO To th' platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

IAGO

You see this fellow that is gone before:
 He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar
 And give direction. And do but see his vice:
 'Tis to his virtue a just equinox, 110
 The one as long as th' other. 'Tis pity of him.
 I fear the trust Othello puts him in
 On some odd time of his infirmity
 Will shake this island.

MONTANO But is he often thus?

IAGO

'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep. 115
 He'll watch the horologe a double set,
 If drink rock not his cradle.

MONTANO It were well
 The General were put in mind of it.
 Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature
 Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio 120
 And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

IAGO (aside to him) How now, Roderigo!
 I pray you, after the Lieutenant: go!

Exit Roderigo.

MONTANO

And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor
 Should hazard such a place as his own second 125
 With one of an ingraft infirmity.
 It were an honest action to say
 So to the Moor.

IAGO Not I, for this fair Island:
 I do love Cassio well, and would do much
 To cure him of this evil:—But, hark! what noise? 130

OTHELLO

Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;
 The gravity and stillness of your youth
 The world hath noted, and your name is great
 In mouths of wisest censure. What's the matter, 175
 That you unlace your reputation thus,
 And spend your rich opinion for the name
 Of a night-brawler? Give me answer to't.

MONTANO

Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger.
 Your officer, Iago, can inform you— 180
 While I spare speech, which something now offends me—
 Of all that I do know. Nor know I aught
 By me that's said or done amiss this night;
 Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
 And to defend ourselves it be a sin 185
 When violence assails us.

OTHELLO

Now, by heaven,
 My blood begins my safer guides to rule,
 And passion, having my best judgement collied,
 Assays to lead the way. 'Zounds, if I stir
 Or do but lift this arm, the best of you 190
 Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
 How this foul rout began, who set it on,
 And he that is approved in this offence,
 Though he had twinned with me, both at a birth,
 Shall lose me. What! in a town of war, 195
 Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
 To manage private and domestic quarrel,
 In night, and on the court and guard of safety!

 Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,

IAGO

Touch me not so near.

I had rather ha' this tongue cut from my mouth
 Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
 Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth 205
 Shall nothing wrong him. This it is, General.
 Montano and myself being in speech,
 There comes a fellow crying out for help,
 And Cassio following with determined sword
 To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman 210
 Steps in to Cassio and entreats his pause.
 Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
 Lest by his clamour—as it so fell out—
 The town might fall in fright. He, swift of foot,
 Outran my purpose; and I returned the rather 215
 For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
 And Cassio high in oath; which till to-night
 I ne'er might see before. When I came back—
 For this was brief—I found them close together
 At blow and thrust; even as again they were 220
 When you yourself did part them.
 More of this matter can I not report.
 But men are men; the best sometimes forget.

 As men in rage strike those that wish them best, 225
 Yet surely Cassio, I believe, received some bodily wound: there is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit and lost without deserving. You have lost no 250 reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the General again: you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice: even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion. IAGO You or any man living may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our General's wife is now the General. I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark and denotement of her parts and graces. ## SCENE I. CYPRUS. BEFORE THE CASTLE.

Enter Cassio with Musicians.

CASSIO

Masters, play here. I will content your pains:
 Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, General.' Music.

Enter Clown.

CLOWN Why, masters, ha' your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' th' nose thus?

MUSICIAN How, sir, how? 5

CLOWN Are these, I pray, called wind-instruments?

MUSICIAN Ay, marry, are they, sir.

CLOWN O, thereby hangs a tail.

MUSICIAN Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

CLOWN Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. 10
 But, masters, here's money for you. And the General so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

Flatter has pointed out how the half-lines indicate Iago's calculated hesitations—"these stops." dilatone is given in Florio as "a dilation, enlarging, . . . a delay"; and in Cotgrave dilation means a deferring, delaying, etc. In ll. 126-28 Othello says that in a just man, these pent-up hesitations come from the heart and are involuntary (passion cannot rule them).  of make Schmidt glosses this use of mock under his definition 2a: to deride, ridicule, etc.; it comes rather under his 2c: to illude, deceive, beguile, tantalize. More light was thrown when Hunter and Staunton suggested that jealousy's meat on which it feeds is not the object of jealousy but the jealous man himself. The "green-eyed monster" alludes to the cat.
 A paraphrase is: "It is the green-eyed monster which illudes and tantalizes its victim" (possessed of jealousy). Flatter: O, 202, quotes two lines from Spenser's Hymne in Honour of Love to which Sh. seems to be indebted.

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice! 380

O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world,
To be direct and honest is not safe.

I thank you for this profit, and from hence
I'll love no friend sith love breeds such offence.

OTHELLO

Nay, stay:—thou shouldst be honest. 385

IAGO

I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

OTHELLO

By the world,
I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not.
I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh 390
As Dian's visage, is now begrimed and black
As mine own face. If there be cords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied!

IAGO

I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion. 395
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

OTHELLO

It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
 To bring them to that prospect. Damn them then,
 If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster
 More than their own! What then? how then?

I do not like the office:
 But sith I am entered in this cause so far, 415
 Pricked to't by foolish honesty and love,
 I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
 And being troubled with a raging tooth,
 I could not sleep.
 There are a kind of men so loose of soul 420
 That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs.
 One of this kind is Cassio.
 In sleep I heard him say 'Sweet Desdemona,
 Let us be wary, let us hide our loves;'
 And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand, 425
 Cry 'O sweet creature!' and then kiss me hard,

Nay, this was but his dream.

OTHELLO

But this denoted a foregone conclusion.

'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

IAGO

And this may help to thicken other proofs

That do démonstrate thinly.

OTHELLO

I'll tear her all to pieces. 435

IAGO

Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:

Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief

Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

OTHELLO

I gave her such a one: 'twas my first gift. 440

IAGO

I know not that: but such a handkerchief—

I am sure it was your wife's—did I to-day

See Cassio wipe his beard with.

OTHELLO

If it be that,—

IAGO

If it be that, or any that was hers,

It speaks against her with the other proofs. 445

 Make it a darling like your precious eye;
 To lose't or give't away were such perdition
 As nothing else could match. 65

DESDEMONA Is't possible?

OTHELLO

'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it.
 A sibyl, that had numbered in the world
 The sun to course two hundred compasses,
 In her prophetic fury sewed the work;
 The worms were hallowed that did breed the silk;
 And it was dyed in mummy which the skilful
 Conserved of maidens' hearts. 70

DESDEMONA I'faith, is't true?

Most veritable: therefore look to't well. 75

EMILIA

Is not this man jealous?

DESDEMONA

I ne'er saw this before.

100

Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief.

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

EMILIA

'Tis not a year or two shows us a man.

They are all but stomachs and we all but food:

They eat us hungerly, and when they are full 105

They belch us. Look you, Cassio and my husband.

Enter Cassio and Iago.

IAGO

There is no other way: 'tis she must do't.

And, lo, the happiness! Go and importune her.

DESDEMONA

How now, good Cassio! What's the news with you?

CASSIO

Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you

110

That by your virtuous means I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love

Whom I with all the office of my heart

Entirely honour: I would not be delayed.

If my offence be of such mortal kind

115

That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purposed merit in futurity,

Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know so must be my benefit:

So shall I clothe me in a forced content

120

And shut myself up in some other course

To fortune's alms.

DESDEMONA

Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio!

My advocacy is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord, nor should I know him

Were he in favour as in humour altered.

That nightly lie in those unproper beds

Which they dare swear peculiar. Your case is better.

OTHELLO

O, thou art wise: 'tis certain.

IAGO

Stand you awhile apart;

Confine yourself but in a patient list.

Whilst you were here o'erwhelméd with your grief—

75

A passion most unsuiting such a man—

Cassio came hither. I shifted him away,

And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;

Bade him anon return and here speak with me;

The which he promised. Do but encave yourself,

80

And mark the fleers, the gibes and notable scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face;

For I will make him tell the tale anew,

Where, how, how oft, how long ago and when

He hath and is again to cope your wife.

85

I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;

Or I shall say y' are all in all in spleen,

And nothing of a man.

OTHELLO

Dost thou hear, Iago?

I will be found most cunning in my patience;

But—dost thou hear?—most bloody.

IAGO

That's not amiss;

90

But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

Othello withdraws.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,

A huswife that by selling her desires

Buys herself bread and clothes. It is a creature

That dotes on Cassio; as 'tis the strumpet's plague

Alas the heavy day! Why do you weep?
 Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?
 If haply you my father do suspect 45
 An instrument of this your calling back,
 Lay not your blame on me. If you have lost him,
 Why, I have lost him too.

OTHELLO

Had it pleased heaven

To try me with affliction; had they rained 50
 All kind of sores and shames on my bare head,
 Steeped me in poverty to the very lips,
 Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,
 I should have found in some place of my soul
 A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me 55
 A fixed figure for the time of scorn
 To point his slow unmoving finger at!
 Yet could I bear that too: well, very well.

 To do the act that might the addition earn
 Not the world's mass of vanity could make me. 165

In The Library, 4th Series, xxiii, pp. 101-107, Charlton Hinman records the result of investigations in the Folger Library concerning these and other lines in F<sup>1</sup>. The Jonas copy is corrected by hand in ink, and the Sheldon and other copies read:

I haue heard too much: and your words and Performances are no kin together

The line A nd . . . bones, was, as defects in the type show, lifted bodily from Emilia's speech in col. 2 of p. 332 of F<sup>1</sup> (our iv ii 137). As the line as it stood left Performances . . . together. in the air, the compositor replaced the original bones. of p. 332 by bones, Hinman concludes that the error took place in the printing-house at the time of imposition. IAGO O, no: he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident: wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

RODERIGO How do you mean, removing of him? 225

IAGO Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place:
knocking out his brains.

RODERIGO And that you would have me to do?

IAGO Ay, if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He supps to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him. He 230

But I do think it is their husbands' faults
 If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties 85
 And pour our treasures into foreign laps,
 Or else break out in peevish jealousies,
 Throwing restraint upon us, or say they strike us,
 Or scant our former having in despite,
 Why, we have galls, and though we have some grace, 90
 Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know
 Their wives have sense like them: they see and smell
 And have their palates both for sweet and sour
 As husbands have. What is it that they do
 When they change us for others? Is it sport? 95
 I think it is. And doth affection breed it?
 I think it doth. Is't frailty that thus errs?
 It is so too. And have not we affections,
 Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have?
 Then let them use us well: else let them know, 100
 The ills we do, their ills instruct us so.

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,

It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul:
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood,
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow
And smooth as monumental alabaster. 5
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me: but once put out thy light, 10
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have plucked thy rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither: I'll smell it on the tree. 15

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! One more, one more.
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after. One more, and that's the last:
So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears. This sorrow's heavenly:
It strikes where it doth love. She wakes. 20

DESDEMONA

Who's there? Othello?

OTHELLO

Ay, Desdemona.

DESDEMONA

Will you come to bed, my lord?

OTHELLO

Have you prayed to-night, Desdemona? 25

DESDEMONA

Ay, my lord.

OTHELLO

If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconciled as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

DESDEMONA

Alack, my lord, what may you mean by that? 30

OTHELLO

Well, do it, and be brief: I will walk by.
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;
No, heaven forfend! I would not kill thy soul.

DESDEMONA

Talk you of killing?

OTHELLO

Ay, I do.
